Bill Drafted To Curb Use Of U. S. Cash In Primaries

Tennessee Activities to Bring Action in the Next Congress.

Hatch Preparing New Legislation

Walsh Says Discharge of Officials Will Be Penalty.

The Political Front.

Secretary Ickes entered the Eighth Virginia Congressional fight by charging Representative Howard W. Smith "is trying to muscle in and ride into office on the PWA coattails." He criticized Dr. John Lloyd Newcombe, president of the University of Virginia, for thanking Smith for getting PWA funds for the university. Page 4.

The Republican National Committee issued a 100-page volume of "Quotations" from Franklin Delano Roosevelt which it said showed "brazen reversals," "misleading or unfair" statements, and "intellectual dishonesty. Page 2.

Walsh's Prediction.

By William V. Nessly.

The "gutter politics" being resorted to in the Tennessee Democratic senatorial primary, and elsewhere, will bring enactment by the next Congress of sweeping legislation to prevent use of Federal funds and patronage for political purposes, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, predicted yesterday.

Walsh is a member of the special Senate campaign expenditures committee, which on Wednesday issued a scathing denunciation of methods being used in the Tennessee campaign, where Senator George L. Berry, backed by Gov. Gordon Browning, is opposed by Tom Stewart, candidate of the Ed Crump-Senator Kenneth McKellar faction.

Senator Carl Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, who sought in vain to force a prohibition of "politics in relief" into the lending-spending bill at the last session, is drafting the new legislation. Senator Walsh said it would call for dismissal of any Government official or worker who used public funds in politics, and would affect also State employes or officials who handle relief, road, or other appropriations of the Federal Government.

Criminal Offense Seen.

The prohibition might be written into all appropriation bills, or might be enacted in a separate measure making it a criminal offense for those handling Federal funds to "in-

Gov. Browning May Send Troops To Camp of Foe

Nashville, Tenn., July 28 (AP).—Tennessee politics sizzled today amid reports that Gov. Gordon Browning might send National Guardsmen to Memphis Thursday for duty during the Democratic primary voting in the home town of his foremost political foe.

Information leaked out that orders had been given postponing the scheduled departure next week of some militiamen for out-of-State maneuvers.

Browning, who is seeking renomination, said he would make known his plans "next Tuesday," the day after he speaks in Memphis, where resides E. H. Crump, head of the political organization opposing Browning. Crump is national Democratic Committeeman.

House in Pa. Votes to Block Earle Inquiry

Bill Killing Jury Quiz of Governor, 13 Others Goes to Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 28.—The top-heavy Democratic majority in Pennsylvania's House of Representatives tonight shouted down Republican opposition and passed an administration bill to suspend a grand jury investigation against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 associates.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where the party division is more nearly equal. The Democrats, however, also have a majority there.

Final Senate action is scheduled this week so the Governor can sign the bill by Saturday morning. The grand jury inquiry into primary campaign charges of "blackmail," "extortion" and coercion for political purposes is scheduled to open August 8.

The Democratic representatives shunted aside Republican pleas for public hearings on the bill that would give the Legislature the sole right to investigate charges of official misconduct against the Governor or any other impeachable officer.

"Not Worth Answering."

Earlier today a statement of Maj. Lynn G. Adams that C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis' opposition cost Adams his job as head of Pennsylvania's police force brought terse comment from Gov. Earle:

"It's not worth answering."

Adams, long-time commander of the Pennsylvania State police before that force was merged with the highway patrol a year ago to become the Pennsylvania motor police, wrote the State's chief executive last night:

"I quit because you called me to your office and told me you could not make me commissioner of the new organization of motor police because John L. Lewis wouldn't stand for it."

The letter was the latest in a series of exchanges between Earle and Adams that began when the Governor termed Adams "a politically-minded henchman" of those promoting the inquiry.

Adams, now a special investigator for District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, who called the grand jury, replied that Earle summoned the spe-

C. I. O. Agents Trailed, Says Steel Sleuth

Republic Police Chief Tells Senate Inquiry of 'Spy' Activity.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee received evidence yesterday that company police of the Republic Steel Corporation attempted to hamper the activities of C. I. O. organizers by shadowing them.

Everywhere they went, the organizers testified, they were followed. One of the witnesses, youthful Robert Burke, of Youngstown, Ohio, told of trapping his pursuers and their automobile in a driveway by parking his own car across the entrance. He said he bargained for two hours' freedom from pursuit by agreeing not to call the police.

The shadowing of the organizers was admitted by Earl Butler, captain of the company's police force in Youngstown, who had arisen to make an indignant denial of Burke's repeated assertions that Republic policemen were "thugs" whether "in or out of uniform."

With an oath, Butler shouted:

"I'm an American citizen. I'm not a thug and neither are my men."

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, of the Investigating Committee seized the occasion to question Butler about the shadowing.

"They (the company police) might have got in back of them but they never stopped them from going any place," Butler said.

"I want this testimony to stop somewhere near the truth," said La Follette, obviously angered at repeated instances of conflicting testimony. "The testimony before the committee has been that these men followed the organizers at your instructions."

"That's right," said Butler.

Bars "Drama."

When Butler and Burke and others displayed a tendency to continue the argument, La Follette remarked that he wanted to "get the testimony regarding these scenes, and not have them re-enacted."

Thomas F. Patton, general counsel for Republic, said he thought the record should show that Burke was convicted, after the "little steel" strike a year ago, of "inciting to riot" during the strike.

Burke and Alex Balint told of

Father Divine Flock Buys Estate Next to Roosevelt at Hyde Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 28.—Krum Elbow, the estate of Howland Spencer, directly across the Hudson River from President Roosevelt's estate at Hyde Park, to which the President also applies the name Krum Elbow, was sold today to followers of Father Major J. Divine, colored cult leader of Harlem.

Gaius G. Bolin, jr., colored attorney, in whose office the deal was closed, said he understood the new tenants would retain the name Krum Elbow.

When the President spoke of his Krum Elbow Estate four or five years ago, Spencer Howland, owner of the estate across the river, announced he was the possessor of the original Krum Elbow. In support of his assertion, he referred to the log of Henry Hudson's Half Moon, in which the navigator, he said, described the jutting point on the west side of the river as a "Krum elbooge," or "crooked elbow."

Spencer pointed out also the promontory on his property was designated by the Geodetic Survey in 1890 as Krum Elbow Point from the early records of Ulster County, the British Engineers' survey of 1770 and from Dutch records of 1667. His defense of the claim attracted considerable interest and evoked support from an unexpected quarter when Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, made the comment that she always had heard the name Krum Elbow applied to the Spencer property on the west side of the river.

Ickes Fights Shopping for Federal Cash

Hopkins Acts With Him as Boston Mayor Jilts PWA for WPA.

3 Investigators Chosen to Check Appeals to Two Agencies.

By the Associated Press.

Officials in charge of Federal funds for relief and public works established a committee of three yesterday to prevent cities and towns from "shopping around" among Government agencies for money.

Secretary Ickes said three WPA representatives had been appointed by WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins to check applications for Public Works Administration funds to prevent any duplication of requests filed with the two agencies.

The new system, he explained, was adopted after Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston, turned down a $1,125,000 PWA grant for a new city hall and announced he would economize by obtaining WPA funds for improvements to the 76-year-old building, which a former Boston mayor characterized as "dangerous, inadequate and antiquated" in appealing for PWA funds.

RFC Aids Program.

Ickes said meanwhile that with the help of RFC's millions the public works program might be expanded to provided another $250,000,000 worth of construction.

He made the estimate in reply to questions about his new working agreement with Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

This would increase the total estimated cost of construction for the whole program to $1,917,000,000. The current ceiling on construction resulting from PWA loans and grants alone is $1,667,000,000. PWA projects approved to date call for $950,000,000 of construction.

155 Projects Approved.

The PWA yesterday approved 155 non-Federal projects, contributing $2,076,000 in loans and $15,727,172 in grants toward an estimated construction cost of $33,623,831. This brought the number of approved PWA projects to 3,815, having a total estimated construction cost of $953,785,199.

Under the new arrangement the RFC will make loans from its $1,500,000,000 fund on big projects receiving grants from PWA.

The indicated immediate effect of the two-agency action was to make possible certain undertakings which PWA has been disinclined to approve for two general reasons: The amount of funds required, and the time needed for completion.

The PWA approved the Boston

Ontario Premier, Missing in Flight, Lands at Yukon

Juneau, Alaska, July 28 (AP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, Canada, found safe after his plane had been reported missing, today abandoned temporarily his air tour of the Dominion.

Ambushers wounded a Jewish woman and six Arab policemen near Bethlehem. A running gun battle ensued.

In Haifa a bomb set off in a courtyard in the mixed quarter injured two Arabs. Incendiary fires destroyed a few Jewish shops and police discovered an unexploded bomb in a street near an English girls' school.

Tunnel Plan Delay Asked By Roosevelt

Thomas Circle Underpass Protests Move President.

Hazen, Delano, Clarke to Draft Report on Project.

Moved by the volume of protests, President Roosevelt has asked the District Commissioners, Fine Arts Commission and National Capital Park and Planning Commission to reconsider plans for a vehicular tunnel at Thomas Circle on the line of Massachusetts avenue.

The President's request was disclosed yesterday at a joint meeting of the two commissions, which was attended by District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan I. Sultan.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning body, said the Chief Executive did not criticize the project, but merely recommended every aspect be carefully considered before construction begins.

Organized opposition to the traffic scheme, for which funds are available in the current District supply bill, was touched off last month by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks. He protested destruction of a number of majestic trees on the avenue.

Much Opposition.

The Mid-City and Columbia Heights Citizens Associations, National City Christian Church and several property owners in the vicinity of the circle have expressed opposition to construction of the tunnel, purpose of which would be to relieve traffic congestion.

Commissioner Hazen and Chairmen Frederic A. Delano and Gilmore D. Clarke of the planning and arts groups, respectively, were delegated to draft a report for transmittal to the President. Whether they will advise the project be deferred, modified or be carried out without change was not disclosed.

Originally the Budget Bureau recommended the auto subway be built at Dupont Circle. The House substituted Thomas, but when the 1939 appropriations bill went to the Senate the item was killed. Thomas Circle was restored in conference, surviving to final passage.

Passed Only on Design.

Clarifying the Fine Arts Commission's position, H. P. Cammerer, secretary, said that body passed only upon the tunnel's design when it gave its approval last month, not being concerned with utilitarian features.

The closed meeting of the two commissions considered architectural and landscaping plans for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial which

Eight heat prostrations were reported in Washington yesterday when above-normal humidity combined with a 93 temperature to make sweltering Washingtonians suffer one of the most uncomfortable days of the summer.

Climbing from the day's low of 70 at 6 a. m., the Weather Bureau's thermometer reached its peak of 93 at 3:45 p. m. while the humidity stood at 50 per cent or 10 degrees above normal. The forecast for today is continued warm and generally fair with thundershowers in the late afternoon.

Those overcome by the heat and treated at local hospitals were William Duncan, 300 block of N street northwest; James Birdsong, 1541 Fourth street northwest; 'James Wright, 38 Jackson street northeast; Bertha Quarles, 8 L street northwest; Ada Wilson, 51 Eye street northwest; Leslie Thomas, Alexandria, Va.; Julian Ross, 713 Smith road northwest, and Warren McGee, 1406 Seventh street northwest.

Mattson Suspect Held in California

Truckee, Calif., July 28 (U.P.).—Highway Patrolman N. F. Dolly said late today that Herman De Vall, 28, who resembles artists' drawings of the Charles Mattson kidnaper, had admitted being in Tacoma, Wash., in December, 1936, when the crime was committeed.

Dolly said De Vall had admitted during questioning that he was the Mattson kidnaper but that immediately afterward he had denied all knowledge of the crime.

De Vall, a former relief worker in Omaha, Nebr., was arrested by Patrolmen Dolly and Gene Walker as he rode through Truckee on a freight train.

Garfield Warns Bar Of Centralized Trend

Fears 'Complete Change in Our Form of Government.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 28.—James R. Garfield, son of the twentieth President of the United States and Secretary of the Interior under Theodore Roosevelt, warned the American Bar Association today that unless checked, the development of administrative agencies combining in one body legislative, executive and judicial power would mean "a complete change in our form of government."

Garfield spoke on behalf of the report of the bar association's special committee on administrative law, which assailed Federal regulatory bodies for their tendencies to make decisions without hearings or hearing only one of the parties, to make decisions on matters not before them or on evidence not produced, and to make decisions "on the basis of preformed opinions and prejudices."

After hearing Garfield's arguments, the house of delegates, ruling body of the association, adopted

Gallinger Gets PWA Funds to End Crowding

Allotment of $2,093,625 Also Includes Hospital for Training School.

Overcrowding and unsanitary conditions at Gallinger Hospital and District Training School at Laurel, Md., long acute problems, soon will become things of the past, it was learned yesterday as PWA Administrator Harold Ickes allotted an additional $2,093,625 for four projects here.

To the hospital, a few of whose buildings go back to Civil War times, Ickes made a grant of $258,000 and a loan of $316,500 for the construction and equipment of a new ward building, a new morgue and an addition to the nurse's home. Estimated cost of the construction is $575,000.

Officials at the hospital said the new five-story building would house no surgical cases, but only patients suffering from diseases.

The allotment brings to $1,225,000 the amount to be spent on the hospital.

Death Brought Action.

At present surgical and medical cases are crowded together in one main building. Two floors are devoted to surgical cases. Officials intimated that all medical cases would be transferred to the new building when it is completed, and the old building would be devoted to the surgical cases.

The ward building, it was understood, will provide beds for 200 tuberculosis patients.

Last December, following the death of a 2-year-old child, who perished in a fire in her crib in the children's ward, members of Congress who fashion District legislation pledged themselves to support efforts to remedy conditions at the hospital.

A few days later Commissioners Hazen and Sultan recommended expansion of the institution. The Federation of Citizens Associations also urged an emergency appropriation for the hospital.

Jammed wards, patients often inadequately cared for because of insufficient facilities, and a generally congested state of affairs will be remedied as soon as the new construction is finished.

At the District Training School conditions have been described as "horrible."

Germans Call Czech Breach Unbridgeable

Sudeten Party Tells Briton He'll Have a Hard Job as Mediator.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, July 28.—The Sudeten German party declared tonight in an official press letter that the "cleavage between Czechs and Germans appears no longer bridgeable."

The statement hinted ominously that Viscount Runciman, Britain's unofficial mediator in the Czechoslovak government dispute with 3,500,000 Germans and other minorities, faced tremendously difficult odds.

The letter declared it would be unfair to hamper Lord Runciman in his first effort to solve the minority problems but insisted there was a widening breach between the government and the Germans Adolf Hitler has declared he would protect.

It added that British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, in his Tuesday Parliament address announcing Lord Runciman's appointment, brought before the world "unreserved acknowledgment of the Sudeten Germans as a partner in the negotiations."

In a practical sense, the statement said, this amounted to unofficial recognition of Sudeten Germans as a "staatsvolk," with equal rights, instead of as a minority.

Great Britain's traditional policy, it said, was to conclude a compromise.

"English diplomacy found ways to worm into the Spanish as well as into Czech developments," the party document said. "To Burgos they sent a 'commercial agent,' to Prague they send an 'adviser and observer.'"

Thornton also composed "When You Were Sweet Sixteen."

Cardozo Willed Housekeeper $75,000; Residue to Columbia

Kate A. Tracy, elderly housekeeper for the Supreme Court Justice Benjamin Cardozo and a retainer of the Cardozo family for about 30 years, was bequeathed $75,000 by the jurist according to a will filed in White Plains, N. Y., yesterday.

The trusted employe, who declared she will return to her home in White Plains, N. Y., after packing the personal belongings of the late Justice, received the largest of five cash bequests made to friends and servants. Other specific bequests included $25,000 to the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies and $7,500 to Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City.

The residue was left to Columbia University "with the expression of the wish and hope which, however, shall not be construed as a mandatory direction, that the gift be applied to the foundation or maintenance of a chair of jurisprudence in the law school of the university, to be associated with my name and to perpetuate the scientific study of a subject which has been one of my chief interests in life."

Miss Tracy once castigated several of his friends who took him to see Noel Coward's comedy, "Design for Living," because it was an improper play for "our judge" to see.

Another household employe, Catherine Walsh, received $7,500 and Norval H. Hayes, 2811 Sixth street, northeast, was bequested $3,250. Judge Irving Lehman, in whose home the Justice died, receives $2,000 and "any books in my library that he may care to own, the other books, if any, to form part of the residuary estate."

Pact Indicated.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 28.—Prime Minister Chamberlain has received an intimation from Chancellor Hitler that Germany might be willing, in the near future, to consider negotiation of an air pact, to reduce the menace of the bombing plane.

A pact for the reduction of aerial armaments has long been the goal of Chamberlain and his predecessor, Stanley Baldwin. British leaders have been haunted by the nightmare of Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's bombers dropping death and destruction upon a vulnerable London. At the same time British technicians are designing bombers capable of reaching German cities. London, because of its geographical position and its immense size, is more vulnerable than Berlin.

Aide Rumored on Way.

Diplomatic circles were mildly agog tonight over rumors Hitler is sending his confidential emissary and personal aide, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, back to England to discuss an air pact with Chamberlain.

Unlike some professional diplomats, Wiedemann is known as a go-getter who does things in a hurry. Two weeks ago he slipped into London for a secret meeting with the foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, which resulted in the British decision to send Viscount Runciman to Prague as a mediator between the Czechs and the Sudeten Germans. Wiedemann is expected to return to London but exactly how soon is the question.

Circumstantial stories had it Wiedemann was arriving this weekend to be a guest of the Prime Minister at his country home at Chequers. The foreign office and the German Embassy both professed ignorance, but Fleet street diplo-

40 Die in Burma; Buddhist-Moslem Clash in 3d Day

Rangoon, Burma, July 28 (AP).—Three days of street fighting between Burmese Buddhists and Indian Moslems reached a new climax today when 40 persons, including five Indian women, were killed.

Armored cars have patrolled the streets since Tuesday when disorders broke out following publication of a book by a Mohammedan allegedly offensive to Buddhism.

More than 250 persons have been wounded.

Late tonight fierce fighting flared out again in several Indian and Burmese parts of Rangoon.

Indians and Burmese roamed the native localities armed with weighted sticks and daggers. All British shops were closed.

Queries Parried By H. A. Morgan At TVA Inquiry

Chairman Pleads Age and Memory in Referring Questions to Aide.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 28.—Harcourt A. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority since the deposition of Arthur Morgan by President Roosevelt, stalled off all cross-examination today before the Congressional investigating committee, on purchases of phosphate lands and other matters, by pleading poor memory and referring the committee to Dr. Harry Curtis, chief chemical engineer.

After reading a long statement of reply to charges made agaainst him by Arthur Morgan, the new chief of the TVA replied to a series of questions by Representative Charles A. Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey, that since he was 10 years older than his predecessor he preferred not to trust to recollection of disputed matters. He admitted that he had made no independent investigation of the deal with the International Agricultural Corporation for phosphate lands which netted that corporation a profit of $500,000 in a $628,000 purchase. He said he merely took the recommendations of Dr. Curtis, and used his judgement, "as an administrator and not an operating man."

Dr. Morgan denied any suggestion by Arthur Morgan that there might have been impropriety in his conferences with commercial fertilizer makers.

The witness commented on a denial by Dr. Arthur Morgan that he ever threatened to resign if David E. Lilienthal were reappointed to the TVA board by reading from a statement by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, in the Congressional Record of March 8, 1938, as follows: "I was dumbfounded one day when Dr. Arthur Morgan, chairman of the board, came into my office and frankly announced that if Mr. Lilienthal were appointed he would resign."

Reams of Charts Pour Into Trust Inquiry Hopper

By the Associated Press.

Reams of statistics and charts, indicating concentrated control in New York of billions of dollars of investment company assets, were poured into the Government's monopoly study hopper yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The figures, which proved the sensational rise and fall of investment company assets between 1927 and 1936, were included in a 161-page report transmitted to Congress by the SEC as part two of its analysis of the investment trust industry.

Management investment companies, the report showed, have been concentrated largely in New York City and its neighborhood. The maximum number of such companies at any year end was only 44 and the total number in existence over the 1927-1936 period was only about 50.

The commission reported that at the end of 1927, total assets stood at $1,800,000,000. The market value then increased to a boom peak of $8,000,000,000 in 1929, then slumped to a depression low of $2,000,000,000 in 1932.

Indians' Charm Works Too Well—They're Swamped

The Office of Indian Affairs said "we're licked."

They had spent months in obtaining the return of the "Thunderbird" to the North Dakota Gros Ventre Indians so that rains would be brought by the charm and now the rains have come so heavily that one Indian wants the Office of Indian Affairs ot take the "Thunderbird" away.

"We will seek legislation against this sort of thing," said an exasperated spokesman. "Or we may take the "Thunderbird" to the Navajo Desert and get some rains out there."

It was all the latest development in a long cry from Dakota. The Gros Ventres (or Waterbusters) historically owned the "Thunderbird." In 1907, the charm was taken to the Heye Foundation Museum in New York. Negotiations for its return ended in January, last, when Foolish Bear and Drags Wolf brought back the charm.

The rains came.

And yesterday, the Office of Indian Affairs received a letter from Scott H. Peters, a Chippewa employe of the Indian Service at Milwaukee, asking Commissioner Collier to persuade the Gros Ventre to return the charm to the museum "and let the white man control the weather."

Working for Washington

Today's Boy Is Chief Interest Of Washington Optimist Club

Harris & Ewing.

R. J. KAEMMERER.

Headed by R. J. A. Kaemmerer, Group Works in Co-operation With Club in Furnishing Library for 15,000 Youths Annually.

By Christine Sadler

Boys are the chief interest of the Washington Optimist Club, which has worked in close co-operation with the Boys Club of Washington in furnishing library facilities to the club for approximately 15 years.

"We feel that the fate of tomorrow's business depends on today's boys, and that if we can point their steps in the right direction we will have been a help," says R. J. A. Kaemmerer, president of the downtown Optimist group.

The club steers clear of the word "underprivileged," feeling it to be a misnomer that tends to keep some boys away from the scene of worthwhile activities.

Last year attendance at the new library sponsored by Optimists at the Boys Club was 16,341 boys. According to the librarian, attendance has averaged around 15,000 boys annually for 12 years. In addition to providing books to read, the library project includes story hours, help with lessons and public speaking.

The junior oratorical contest sponsored by the club each year has uncovered much youthful talent. The winner this year won third place in the national contest.

An outstanding piece of work by the club during last year was equipment of a dental and medical clinic at the new Boys Club building.

Junior Optimist clubs are encouraged and through them various sports and recreations are sponsored. The club has given numerous scholarships to worthy and talented boys.

Washington Optimists were organized in 1915 and today total 130 business and professional men. A year and a half ago the downtown group sponsored formation of the East Washington Optimist Club, which is headed by Louis Gundling and has more than 100 members.

Kemmerer is serving his first term as president. For three years he was district governor for the territory including the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

He came to the District from St. Louis in 1923 and became an Optimist in 1926. His principal work is being branch manager for Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. He is married and has one son.

On Monday—Joseph W. Marshall, director of the Better Business Bureau of Washington, D. C., will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Union Distrust Justified, Jury At Harlan Told

Defense Counsel Say Mine Workers Linked With Reds, Riff-Raff.

By the Associated Press.

London, Ky., July 28.—H. C. Gillis, defense counsel, told the Harlan antilabor conspiracy trial jury today coal operators were justified in distrusting the United Mine Workers of America, which "held to its bosom Russian reds, communists and all that kind of riff-raff."

Gillis opened summation for the defense in the trial of 56 Harlan County coal operators, former peace officers and coal corporations against charges of conspiracy to violate the Wagner labor act.

Testimony that one of the defendant companies, Harlan Collieries, had staged "strip-tease" shows as rival attractions to union meetings, was attacked by Cleon K. Calvert, of Pineville, another member of defense counsel, who declared union members themselves desired the shows and paid for some of them.

"They say the girls were naked," cried Calvert. "Well, they didn't have much on, but it was enough. And as far as that goes, there's a show in Washington, where these attorneys general come from, that puts on shows like that every night."

The Government's testimony that deputy sheriffs fired on Marshall Musick, a U. M. W. A. organizer, and his wife from ambush, but did not injure them, was derided by Gillis, who said if it were true, "they (the deputies) ought to have resigned and gone farming"

Security Board Ends Largest Auditing Job

Wages Earned for 1937 Credited to Accounts of Workers.

The first phase of the world's largest bookkeeping job has been completed by the Social Security Board, which worked at the rate of 1,000,000 numbers a day, officials announced yesterday.

Their job was crediting wages each employe received in 1937 to his social security account under the old age insurance system.

A separate wage account, identified by an account number, is maintained for each worker since the amount of each employe's benefits will be determined by total wages received.

If the wages received by the employe when he reaches 65 does not qualify him for a monthly retirement income, or if he dies before the minimum amount to which he is entitled is achieved, the system provides for a single payment, based on the total amount of his wages, to the worker or his heirs, as the case may be.

Managers of the field offices have been instructed to advise any person wishing to inquire about his account number to give the same name he used in applying for his account number.

The total account numbers issued in Washington is greater than the number issued in 12 states, Victor Sadd, manager of the Washington field office, said. He asserted that up to June 30, 249,988 account numbers had been issued to applicants here.

G. O. P. Begins Quotation War Upon President

Book Containing Excerpts From Speeches Printed as 'Ammunition.'

By the United Press.

The Republican National Committee yesterday accused President Roosevelt of "intellectual dishonesty," of making many "misleading or unfair" statements, and of executing "brazen reversals" in position in order to capitalize on changes in the political situation.

The allegations are contained in the preface of a 100-page booklet entitled "Quotations from Franklin Delano Roosevelt," which was prepared and published by the committee as ammunition for Republican candidates in the current elections. On the cover is a quip by Benjamin Franklin, "Saying and doing have quarreled and parted."

The quotations cover a wide range of topics, including a balanced budget, Congress and the President, cost of Government, Government and business, politics in relief, pork barrel prices, Roosevelt recovery, Roosevelt depression, agricultural planning, banking and finance, communism, fascism, the Constitution and freedom of the press.

Oath of Office.

One of the shortest subjects is headed "The Pledge to the People." Occupying less than one-third of a page, it contains only the President's oath of office, taken upon his two inaugurations, and a statement he made in a radio address on May 7, 1933, that "I am going to be honest at all times with the people of the country."

The committee insisted in its preface, however, that "many manifestly misleading or unfair statements will be found in the record." Statements are included in the booklet, it said, which show Administration favor to special groups, disfavor to others, "all instilling class hatred formerly unknown in this country."

"Obvious inconsistencies are included—brazen reversals of position made in order to capitalize on changes in the political situation; promises made to one group which are basically incompatible with promises made to other groups are found throughout," it was said. "And intellectual dishonesty permeates the entire fabric of the President's declared philosophy."

His Charleston Speech.

The Chief Executive's speech at Charleston, S. C., on October 23, 1935, was cited as excellent material for use in pinning the depression on the New Deal. Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Yes, we are on our way back—not just by pure chance, my friends, not just by a turn of the wheel of the cycle. We are coming back more soundly than ever before because we are planning it that way. Don't let anybody tell you differently."

Two years later the Nation skidded into another economic tailspin.

Typical of the quotations cited in the booklet are:

Balanced budget: " . . . The Treasury is all right and we are balancing the budget—you needn't worry— . . . " Havre, Mont., October 3, 1937.

Cost of Government: " . . . I shall approach the problem of carrying out the plain precept of our party, which is to reduce the cost of Government operations by 25 per cent." Pittsburg, Pa., October 19, 1932.

Elastic Constitution.

Government and business: "I believe, I have always believed, and I will always believe in private enterprise as the backbone of economic well-being in the United States." Chicago, Ill., October 14, 1938.

Constitution: "The United States Constitution has proven itself the most marvelously elastic compilation of rules of government ever written" Radio address, March 2, 1930.

"It can hardly be doubted that our people are restive under the slow and uncertain processes of the law." August 25, 1937.

Dictatorship: "The doctrine of regulation and legislation by 'master minds,' in whose judgment and will all the people may gladly and quietly acquiesce, has been too glaringly apparent at Washington during these last 10 years." Radio address, March 2, 1930.

U. S. Income Is Set At Over 30 Billion For 1st Half of '38

The Commerce Department yesterday said individuals in the United States had an aggregate income of $30,630,000,000 in the first six months of 1938, or 8 per cent less than in the first half of last year.

June income, the department added, was 12 per cent below the figure for June, 1937.

Should income payments in the latter half of the year equal those of the first half, the year's total of about $61,000,000,000 would be some $8,000,000,000 under the 1937 figure.

The Gallup Poll

Two in Three of New Tax Plans Considered by Treasury Approved in Public Survey.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, July 28.—Of the three new tax proposals which the Treasury Department is now examining with a view to reducing the Federal deficit, two have the popular support of the public and one is opposed by a large majority of voters, according to recent national surveys of opinion conducted by the Institute.

George Gallup

The three proposals, as outlined last week by Acting Secretary Roswell Magill, would call for (1) a levy on the income of all future Federal, State and municipal securities (such securities are now tax exempt), (2) a tax on the salaries of State and local government employes, (3) a general broadening of the personal income tax base through lowering of exemptions.

The public's reaction to these proposals is vital as an indication of which type of levy would be palatable to taxpayers and which would not.

The surveys found relatively little public opposition to the first proposal—a levy on tax-free Government securities. This was approved by a large majority, even among voters in the upper income class who as security holders would feel the tax most. The majority likewise favored the second proposal, expressing the view that Government employes should pay Federal income taxes just like anybody else. Both these proposals have been personally suggested by President Roosevelt.

But a move toward the third proposal—a tax on small incomes—is likely to meet with marked public opposition. The typical view expressed by voters in the Institute's studies was: "Raising the income tax would only give the Government that much more to spend. Why don't they try economy first?"

Results Summarized.

The results of the surveys were as follows:

"Do you think married men earning less than $2,500 a year should be required to pay a Federal income tax?"
Yes 20%
No 80

"Do you think a single person earning less than $1,000 a year should be required to pay a Federal income tax?"
Yes 13%
No 87

"Should people who own Federal, State and municipal securities be required to pay taxes on the income from these securities?"
Yes 74%
No 26

"Would you favor an amendment to the Constitution requiring employes of State and local governments to pay Federal income taxes?"
Yes 82%

Constitutional Issue Raised.

Various constitutional questions have been raised concerning the last two proposals. Some legal experts maintain that a constitutional amendment would be necessary to give the Federal Government power to tax securities issued by State and local governments and the salaries of State and local government employes. The question has always been whether such an amendment, if necessary, would stand any chance of being ratified.

The Institute's studies are significant because they show that ratification by the people would probably not be difficult to obtain. With such a huge majority of voters in favor of removing these particular tax exemptions, public opposition would be relatively small.

Roosevelt Fishes To Be Preserved At Smithsonian

Aboard Cruiser Houston, in Galapagos Archipelago, July 28 (AP).—The waters about Hood Island yielded President Roosevelt and his party bigger fish today than they had found elsewhere during the past several days.

Tuna, averaging from 30 to 45 pounds, were hooked and brought to boat by the President. Several large golden groupers and other fish—some of unknown species—also were taken and turned over to Prof. Waldo L. Schmitt, of Smithsonian Institution for indentification and preservation.

After lunch the President resumed his fishing, going after smaller ones. The President already had turned over to Prof. Schmitt a number of very tiny fish of rare and little known species.

Expert Praises Parks in District As 'Right Smart'

Theodore Wirth, retired superintendent of Minneapolis park system, gave Washington's parks the once over yesterday and pronounced them "right smart."

THEODORE WIRTH.

"A great investment," parks," he said. "Too much money cannot be spent for their development, here or anywhere else."

Wirth, 74, is the father of Conrad L. Wirth, assistant director of National Park Service. Another son, Walter, is park superintendent at New Haven, Conn.

After 30 years as chief of Minneapolis system, Wirth was retired two years ago. This summer he is making a tour of all State parks.

Fifty years ago Wirth came to the United States from Switzerland. His first job was in the parks system of New York City.

News Indicates Trade Pick-up, Declares U. S. Commerce Aide

Patterson, in Radio Address, Stresses Increased Gains in Automobile and Steel Products Sales as Healthy Sign.

"Unmistakable" news straight from the factories and the stores is that "business is better," Assistant Secretary of Commerce Richard C. Patterson, jr., said in a radio talk over the Mutual System last night.

He cited word that a number of automobile factories still are in production of 1938 cars, though for a while there was so little demand for this year's cars that it didn't seem worth while to keep the plants running.

"Then something happened," he added. "People started buying faster than the cars were coming off the line, with the result that today the average dealer hardly has more than five or six new cars in stock. That won't be enough to last him until the new models come in next fall, so that by the time of the automobile shows a considerable demand for new cars will have stacked up."

An improving demand for steel products since the middle of July has been reported by E. R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of U. S. Steel Corporation, he said. Big users of steel, such as auto plants and railroads have yet to place their orders, Patterson said, the improvement so far being due to diversified orders, household utensils and "thousands of gadgets made of steel."

"Money from the pay envelopes of industry and from the agricultural districts has been flowing rapidly through the stores. The volume of retail trade for the country as a whole has apparently been rising for at least six weeks. Reports coming into the department today, however, show a slight setback in last week's volume of sales in some areas, due largely to adverse weather conditions.

"During the first three weeks of July, twice as many people applied to the Federal Housing Administration for mortgage appraisals as during the same time a year ago. Of course, this doesn't mean necessarily that twice as many homes are constructed, but it does mean definitely that there is a growing demand, and you have only to look about you tomorrow to see that this is true. Other figures bear it out—for instance, the lumber industry, which has felt a decided pick-up within the last few days.

"Furniture manufacturers right now are planning on increased sales in the fall. Manufacturers are reluctant to guarantee present prices beyond September 1. Many other lines of building equipment and house furnishings certainly will feel a steady and persistent upward pull.

Japan Planes Bomb Mission Of U. S. Church

Shells Strike as Marines Warn on Movements in Settlement.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), July 29.—Japanese planes, blasting the way for land forces, bombed the mission of the Reformed Church of the United States at Yochow, a few miles south of Hankow, while Japanese columns today drove forward from three directions upon the apparently doomed provisional capital of the Chinese government. The American church has its headquarters at Philadelphia.

Chinese "surveillance" units struggled to reform the retreating Chinese lines for a last ditch battle east of Hankow. The Chinese reported no casualties after the Yochow bombing.

A Japanese communique reported Japanese planes had raided Yochow, setting fire to a warehouse and several freight cars loaded with munitions, and had destroyed railroad property along the tracks south of Yochow.

Meanwhile scattered groups of foreigners, including 57 Americans at the resort town of Kuling, directly in the path of the retreating Chinese army, took emergency measures for safeguarding their lives and property if the battle should engulf them.

The United States consulate at Hankow reported it had not had any word from the foreigners at Kuling since midnight, July 25, when the American colony reported it was taking emergency measure to concentrate foreigners in churches and foreign-owned buildings.

The town is on a high plateau, and is not likely to be attacked unless the Chinese take defensive positions there.

Simultaneously a sharp warning was issued by United States Marine commanders against "persistent and increasing" movement of armed Japanese troops through the American sector in the International Settlement.

The commander of the Fourth Marines reported violations to Col. C. F. B. Price, commandant of the Marines stationed at Shanghai, and the report was forwarded in writing to the Japanese army staff.

The report cited an agreement between the Japanese and American staffs that no armed transports would be moved through American sentry lines.

Detective Finds Suspect in Theft Waiting—in Cell

Search for suspects in a recent housebreaking was a matter of a few minutes for Detective Sergt. Frank Brass yesterday when he found his man locked up in Twelfth Precinct Station.

Brass was assigned to investigate theft of $432 in jewels and other valuables from the home of Lawrence E. Burdette, 4212 Twelfth place northeast, reported to police Wednesday. The detective found that James L. Hannon, 35, who lives next door to Burdette at 4210, had been held at the station since Tuesday night for investigation.

Hannon admitted the housebreaking, Brass said, and later told where he had disposed of the jewels. A second man arrested with Hannon, Francis J. Stevens, 35, of 1000 block Fifth street northwest, admitted taking part in the housebreaking, Brass said.

A former manager of a transfer company in Richmond, Va., Foster, who had been an invalid for the past two years, told police he "wanted to go."

Franco Bombs 3 British Ships At Valencia

Danish Non-Intervention Officer Is Killed in Raid on Port.

By the United Press.

Valencia, Spain, July 28.—Spanish insurgent bombers followed up the sinking of the British freighter Dellwyn, which stirred widespread resentment in London this week, by bombing the Dellwyn's sister ship, Kellwyn, and two other vessels that lay at anchor in Valencia Harbor.

A Danish control officer of the nonintervention committee, Albert Noyell, and a Chinese cook were killed in the raid as they fled from the rain of shell fragments that sprayed the 1,464-ton vessel when six insurgent bombing planes flew over the harbor.

One of the other vessels was the British steamer Stanleigh, which was damaged by shrapnel.

The raiding planes, appearing off Gen. Franco's Balearic Island base shortly after noon, killed 15 persons, wounded more than a score and damaged 15 buildings, including the seamen's church in the port area.

The Kellwyn, out of Cardiff with a cargo of beans, sugar and other foodstuffs for this besieged loyalist city, was anchored near the Stanleigh when the bombs burst.

The steamer Clonlara, out of Limerick, also was slightly damaged by bits of shrapnel.

The Kellwyn's sister ship, the 1,451-ton Dellwyn, owned by the Cardiff firm of Angel and Son and carrying 1,500 tons of coal, was sunk early yesterday by a lone Insurgent seaplane in the Mediterranean port of Gandia after surviving four previous bombings in four days.

The Danish non-intervention officer, Noyell, 45, of Copenhagen, and the Chinese cook, Liu Fung Yu, were killed as they dashed from the deck of the Kellwyn seeking the safety of an air raid shelter when the six Insurgent planes appeared.

The chief mate of the Kellwyn, Elwyn Evans, of Bangor, North Wales, was cut about the face, throat and chest by bomb splinters and two other members of the crew suffered minor injuries.

Franco Floods Foe.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 28 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Franco today released Ebro flood waters upon loyalist columns, bombed them mercilessly from the air and sent 20,000 new reinforcements into a counter-attack in a desperate effort to shatter the government's whirlwind offensive in eastern Spain.

Despite the intense counter-offensive around Gandesa, insurgent base of operations 90 miles southwest of Barcelona, five columns of the loyalist international brigades appeared to be holding tenaciously to their conquest of 386 square miles of territory.

Gandesa itself was a blasted city occupied both by loyalists and insurgents.

Franco, rushing 20,000 troops into the Gandesa fortifications by motor truck from his Valencia drive south across the insurgent corridor to the Mediterranean, established a new line west of the town near Caseras in his efforts to stem the government push westward.

The position of the five columns of the government's international brigades, made up of Americans and other foreign volunteers, became serious when the insurgents opened the Tremp hydro-electric power dams 80 miles up the Ebro River Valley near the French frontier.

Thousands of tons of water roared down the valley toward the Mediterranean, bringing a water rise of 6 feet and tearing away all that remained of 12 pontoon bridges thrown across the river to open the way for the loyalist offensive westward from the borders of Catalonia.

'Public Enemy No. 1' Slain in Brazil Battle

Rio de Janeiro, July 28 (AP).—The law at last has caught up with "one-Eyed" Lampeao, Brazil's "Public Enemy No. 1" and long considered the most ruthless bandit-killer in the Western world.

Dispatches received today said the bandit, who murdered and plundered in Brazil's northeastern hinterland for 20 years, had been slain in a pitched battle with police.

Reich Jews Unite to Emigrate Race Entirely From Germany

Chief Rabbi of Berlin to Be President of Solid Front; Easier Laws on Passports Will Be Sought to Enable Mass Flight.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 28.—German Jews formed a united front today in an effort to deal more effectively with the problem of Jewish emigration from Germany.

Jewish circles frequently have complained difficulties were put in the way of emigration by passport offices. Jewish sources have added emigration would be faster if conditions for leaving Germany were lighter and simpler. Those that have left Germany still total less than 150,000, Jews estimated.

Formation of a federation of Jews to constitute their official representation in dealings with the government was announced in the weekly Centgal Verein Zeitung, organ of Jewry.

Rabbi Leo Baeck, chief rabbi of Berlin, was named president of the organization.

There are some 300,000 Jews in Germany, including those of absorbed Austria. George Brandt, official United States refugee observer, is here surveying possibilities for transplating some of them to other countries.

Reliable Jewish sources estimate that half of all the Jews will be gone by 1941 and, unless the Nazi regime disapears or changes its racial policy, all will be gone by 1950.

French Favor Letting Franco Retain Moors

Military Men Would Reject Loyalist Demand to Disarm Legion.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 28.—A surprise deadlock in the international plan to remove all foreign "volunteers" from Spain developed tonight when French military leaders urged the government to reject a Spanish loyalist demand the insurgent armies be stripped of all Moroccan and foreign legionnaires.

The loyalist classification of Gen. Franco's African Moors and his Spanish foreign legion as foreigners would, if upheld, seriously jeopardize France's own vast pool of military man power in north Africa, army officials said.

It appeared the government, as a result of the pressure, would refuse to agree to the Barcelona government's condition to deprive Franco of his best fighters.

The loyalist demand was contained in a 3,000-word commentary submitted to Great Britain and France Tuesday, when the Barcelona government agreed to the evacuation plan.

Blonde Bares Red 'Deal' at U. A. W. Trial

Refers to Martin's Charge to Sell Out Labor's Non-Partisan League.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 28.—The trial by which Homer Martin, president, seeks to remove four suspended vice presidents from the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers slowed nearly to a standstill today because of frequent disputes.

Martin, who has charged the four with a Communist conspiracy to disrupt the union, contended his opponents were "trying to filibuster."

Maurice Sugur, attorney for the suspended group, replied that Martin and his aides were using specious objections to suppress discussion that might embarrass him.

A blonde woman, modishly dressed, whose identity was withheld, was called to the room where the executive board is conducting the trial today to relate what Martin said was a "deal with Dick Frankensteen" to turn control of Labor's Nonpartisan League in Wayne County over to the Communist Party.

Martin declined to name the woman, but said she was a former Communist Party member, who heard details of the "deal" at a party meeting.

In four days the board has made little progress, in its session behind closed doors, toward a decision on the charges against Richard T. Frankensteen, Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall and Walter N. Wells.

Frankensteen is county chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Martin is State chairman.

Sugar assailing procedure at the trial, said today that "three of the so-called judges, Martin, Delmond Garst and Lester Washburn, all made statements as to what happened at a meeting with John L. Lewis in April, 1937, thus providing the curious spectacle of judges giving their opinions as witnesses without being sworn."

Mortimer charged in a radio broadcast tonight that a "ruinous and dangerous" group insurance plan, for which he said Martin sought executive board approval, was "the immediate cause of all this trouble." The officers Martin later suspended "demanded a complete airing" of the insurance proposition, Mortimer said, and the deal has not yet been closed. He charged that the proposal "would have vastly damaged our union and exploited our membership."

Martin, commenting on Mortimer's speech, said "the local unions were enthusiastically for a groun insurance plan. The opposition board members never raised the question until they were suspended."

Bondsman Brings Back Missing Theft Suspect

Justice Luhring yesterday ordered James Curtis held in the District Jail for trial next fall on two robbery charges after Curtis' bondsman, Hyman Mendelsohn, had located his client in Baltimore and brought him here. Justice Luhring set aside the Government's attempt to declare the $1,500 bond forfeit. Curtis failed to appear last May to answer the charge.

Giffin Guilty of Drunkenness, Army Says, Reprimands Him

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Daughter Peggy kisses Lieut. Col. Stewart S. Giffin after court-martial yesterday had reprimanded him and ordered him reduced 100 files on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. Lieut. James Smith, jr., testified his charges against the colonel had been influenced by animosity.

Warrior, Convicted on Spite Charge, Lowered on Promotion List, Which Doesn't Matter as He'll Retire in March.

By the United Press.

New York, July 28.—Lieut. Col. Stewart S. Giffin was convicted by an Army court-martial today on two of six counts of drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an officer but was sentenced only to reprimand and a lower rating on the promotion list.

Since Giffin is to retire from the Army in March on three-quarter pay after 30 years' service, the demotion of 100 files on the promotion list will not affect him.

Giffin was disappointed, however, that he did not win complete exoneration on the charges brought by his former friend, Reserve Lieut. James O. Smith, jr., whom Giffin had entertained in his home for three months.

Smith, who admitted the charges were influenced by his personal animosity toward Giffin, accused the colonel of drunkenly crashing a dinner party to which he had not been invited, driving an ice wagon and knocking off a man's hat at a bar.

He said he became "vindictive" toward Giffin after the colonel "welched" on an agreement to make Smith his business partner when he retired from the Army.

Col. Arthur S. Cowan, president of the court-martial, announced that the verdict was based on the ninety-sixth article of war instead of the more drastic nineyt-fifth, under which dismissal from the Army is mandatory on conviction. Giffin was tried under both articles.

Giffin was found guilty of being drunk at the Occidental Hotel in Goshen, N. Y., on March 10, 1937, and at a Halloween party.

Hotel Aide Denies Barring D. C. Pair

Boston, July 28 (AP).—Bradford E. Ross, assistant manager of a Boston hotel, pleaded not guilty today to a charge of discriminating against colored persons. The case was continued until September 7.

Ralph Mizelle, who gave his address as 1321 R street northwest, Washington, D. C., identified by his attorney, Julian Rainey, as a postal inspector, and his wife Jane M., of New York City, identified as an assistant corporation counsel, charged they were denied a room at the hotel last night. They are both colored.

Ross contended all rooms were occupied or engaged, but the Mizelles said they saw other persons register after they were refused a room.

Ickes Accuses Howard Smith Of 'Muscling In'

Virginian 'Opposed and Fought Every PWA Bill,' Says Secretary.

By Edward T. Folliard

Secretary Ickes, of the Interior Department, waded into the primary fight in Virginia's Eight Congressional District yesterday with a bitter attack on Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, who comes up for renomination Tuesday.

"Representative Smith," Ickes said at a press conference, "has obstructed, opposed and fought every PWA bill and now it looks like he is trying to muscle in and ride into office on the PWA coat tails."

Supporters of William E. Dodd, jr., of Round Hill, who is campaigning for Smith's seat on a platform that "a vote for Dodd is a vote for Roosevelt," were jubilant when they heard of Ickes' blast. It was the first time that a member of the Roosevelt cabinet had openly intervened in the fight, and they hailed it as a major break, a further proof that Dodd, though lacking the President's personal blessing, is indeed the New Deal's choice.

Judge Smith, who has opposed several New Deal measures in the House, declined to comment on Ickes' statement. He also declined to say whether he would answer it when he talks over Station WJSV at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

His supporters, however, expressed indignation at "outside interference" in a local election contest. Some predicted that Ickes' attack would prove a boomerang, and that Virginians now "on the fence" would rally to Judge Smith.

J. Maynard Magruder, president of the Democratic Club of Arlington County and president of the Roosevelt-for-President Club there in 1936, said:

"I strongly resent Ickes' attempt to interfere in this campaign in the Eighth District, which is purely a local matter. However, I do not think his statement will affect the outcome on Tuesday. Judge Smith will come out of Arlington County with a 3-to-1 vote."

Secretary Ickes attack on Judge Smith was occasioned by a letter sent to Smith on July 18 by Dr. John Lloyd Newcombe, president of the University of Virginia. This letter was in response to one from Smith inquiring about a statement by S. Coleman Rosenberger, president of the Student Dodd-for-Congress Club, which said that "Throughout his eight years in office, Representative Smith has callously disregarded the welfare of the university."

Dr. Newcombe reminded Smith that the University of Virginia never took part in political campaigns, never undertook to prefer one candidate to another.

After denouncing Smith for fighting PWA bills, Ickes said:

"I resent President Newcombe trying to drag PWA into politics. And he is dragging it in by sheer force. It looks to me as though this letter might have been written in Representative Smith's headquarters and sent to President Newcombe to sign on the dotted line. Political considerations did not enter into any project in Representative Smith's district. He was not influential in securing any projects. No Senators or Congressmen were seen in regard to Virginia's applications."

A reporter said:

"Now, Mr. Secretary, do you want this to get into the newspapers? Aren't you dragging the PWA into——"

Ickes replied:

"I don't care if it gets into the papers."

Preliminaries Near Finish in Battle of Dewey and Hines

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 28.—Legal skirmishing preliminary to the trial on August 15 of James J. Hines, Tammany leader of the Eleventh Assembly District, and his eight conspirators neared an end today when Justice Ferdinand Pecora, in Supreme Court, granted District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey a blue ribbon panel from which to select a jury and directed him to give Hines a bill of particulars by next Tuesday, naming the judges and other public officials allegedly bribed, intimidated or influenced by the defendants.

It was an unhappy day in court for the Tammany leader's forces. After overruling Hine's plea for an ordinary jury, Justice Pecora set aside the defense order for framing the bill of particulars in favor of one supplied by Dewey requiring the district attorney to name the officials reputed to have been bribed without specifying which defendant approached what official. The prosecution will comply with this order.

Roosevelt Invites Statisticians Here

The International Statistical Institute will meet next year in Washington if President Roosevelt's invitation, to be presented at the 1938 congress in Prague in September, is accepted. The last international congress held in this country was in connection with the Chicago World's Fair in 1893.

The invitation will be extended by Wilbur J. Carr, American Minister to Czechoslovakia. In anticipation of its acceptance, a committee on arrangements already has been appointed by American members of the institute.

The 1939 congress will coincide with the celebration of the 100th birthday of the American Statistical Association.

Fireworks at Civil Liberties Hearing

having been beaten while distributing union literature at Republic mill gates, Burke alleging that this was done by the company police, and Balint naming Kenneth Sodders, a Republic policeman, as his assailant. Sodders vehemently denied it.

John Steuben, union organizer, testified that he tried, but failed, to get radio time from a Youngstown station, but succeeded in getting time on the program of a station in Akron. He received, he said, a threat that his speaker would never "get to the radio station."

The car which took the speaker there was trailed by Republic police, he continued, but a telephone call to the Rubber Workers Union in Akron brought two carloads of union men to the station and the speaker was not molested. The company police were armed, Steuben said.

He pointed out three Republic policemen as having been in the trailing automobile. They all made heated denials.

Lied Way Into Job.

A former Republic Steel Corporation policeman testified that he lied his way into a job as a C. I. O. organizer and then signed the names of steel workers to membership cards without their knowledge.

The ex-policeman, Walter Maloney, of Cleveland, readily told the committee, under questioning by La Follette, that he had falsely accused Elmer Lohman, a former S. W. O. C. organizer, of having signed him up as a union member and having reported his name to Republic.

It was all a part of an idea he conceived to gain the confidence of S. W. O. C. officials, Maloney explained, so that he could learn more about union activities in the period preceding the "little steel" strike of 1937.

Balint, grim-faced union organizer testified he and other union officials became suspicious of Maloney when they found he had lied about being employed as a laborer in the Republic coke plant in Cleveland.

Before they suspected him, Maloney said, he took out of the city directory in filling out the 18 or 20 cards he turned in as an S. W. O. C. organizer. He said the $1 initiation fee for each came out of the $25 a week he received from the union.

He was a "little green" about the operations of the Wagner labor relations act, he added.

James L. Williams, Republic police chief, told the committee he was never "very strict" in checking on the character of applicants for company police jobs. Usually, he said, applicants were required to furnish three references.

La Follette produced a report from the Cleveland Police Department on Maloney's record in that city.

It showed that he twice was sentenced for petty larceny, once after being arrested on a charge of burglary and larceny. On another occasion he was sent to jail on a charge of destroying property and once was given a 60-day sentence for an automobile law violation.

During the 1937 Republic strike, Maloney testified, he was arrested for having "fictitious" automobile tags.

Questioning Williams, LaFollette brought out that the company added 78 men to its force from March, 1936, to March, 1937, when 348 men were on the rolls.

Vincent Favarito, another union organizer, testified that after a union meeting September 21 he was attacked by three men, one of whom struck him with a gun and another with a blackjack. He said he recognized two of them as Republic Steel police.

Unionist Beaten Up.

Charles Doyle, Buffalo union organizer, said his efforts to contact steel workers were hampered because he was followed by company guards. Doyle said that after a union meeting in Buffalo in September, 1936, he and another union man were "beaten up" by four men.

He identified Henry Frears, Republic policeman, as one of the four. Frears replied the union men picked a fight with him and that he "did not lay a hand" on Doyle, or any others, in a fight that followed. He said three other company police were at the scene, but denied they were there by prearrangement.

G. E. Todd, captain of Republic police, testified Doyle was "commonly known in Buffalo as a Communist and an atheist." Doyle, he said, is on the Communist Party pay roll.

"That was the reason, Senator, that we followed these fellows around in Buffalo," Todd said.

"Do you follow all Communists in Buffalo?" La Follette asked.

"I don't have enough policemen to shadow all of them," the witness said.

Urged to name the Buffalo Communist now under surveillence by Republic police, Todd named Daniel Summers and a Mrs. Bowman. He said about three or four Communists, usually were under surveillence by company police.

timidate or bring pressure on voters," the Senator said.

Walsh said that preliminary reports to the committee in the Tennessee race "indicate methods are being used to influence votes and money is being used on such a lavish scale that it is almost unbelievable that a political election could reach such a low level."

He declared "the American people would be shocked" if conditions reported to the committee are widespread, and said that "apparently to get a real picture of the situation, the committee ought to have an investigator in almost every voting precinct, which of course is impossible."

Disclaim Blame.

Meanwhile, some of the Tennessee figures were quick to disclaim blame.

Senator McKellar, supporting Stewart against Senator Berry, told the Associated Press "the committee's investigator has not been telling the truth," and added that charges that Federal employes had been assessed contributions to this campaign are absolutely false and untrue."

Senator Berry declared the committee inquiry "doesn't in any way concern me," and Stewart said he welcomed "the fullest investigation."

The charges were filed with the committee by Dr. John R. Neal, another senatorial candidate.

At the same time, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, running for re-election from California with the active support of President Roosevelt, wired to the committee a denial of charges that Federal jobholders were being assessed 5 per cent of their annual pay to finance his campaign. He asked the committee to investigate the financing of the campaigns of all the candidates for his seat.

Move Was Voted Down.

The Hatch move to prevent "politics in relief" was voted down after Senator Alben Barkley, Democratic leader, who is opposed for renomination in Kentucky by Gov. A. B. Chandler, declared it would be unfair to Federal officials when State machines, with their highway and other organizations were not included. At the time Senator Dennis Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, said adoption of the Hatch amendment would mean the "defeat of Senator Barkley."

The Senate Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, is awaiting complete reports from the investigator it sent to Kentucky to investigate charges and countercharges of improper political activity. The committee hopes to have the reports by next Tuesday. The Tennessee primary is next Thursday, August 4, and that in Kentucky two days later.

Senator Sheppard yesterday pressed its investigation of charges that the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture had used its franking privilege to mail out a 2-year-old press release said to be favorable to Gov. Tom Berry of South Dakota, now the Democratic nominee for Senator.

Press Release Cited.

The press release dealt with the difficulties of a Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Gadbois and their 16 children, who had lost their farm and were in desperate straits until finally aided by the rural credit system on the request of Gov. Berry. The heading on the release read:

"It was hard for family of 18 to find suitable home in town after losing farm, but Governor helped; now they're well fixed on another farm."

The committee already had asked Postmaster General Farley to investigate the alleged misuse of the frank, and yesterday Senator Sheppard wrote to Will A. Alexander, FSA administrator, asking what official was responsible for the distribution. The letter said:

"In addition, the committee will appreciate your investigating all the facts in connection with the preparation and issuance of this circular by employes of the Department of Agriculture, Farm Security Administration or other Federal bureau, reporting your findings to the committee. Also advise what, if any action you have taken or contemplate taking against the employes involved.

"The committee would likewise appreciate receiving copies of any regulations issued by your bureau or the Department of Agriculture with respect to what, if any, limitations are placed on its employes' activities in political contests.

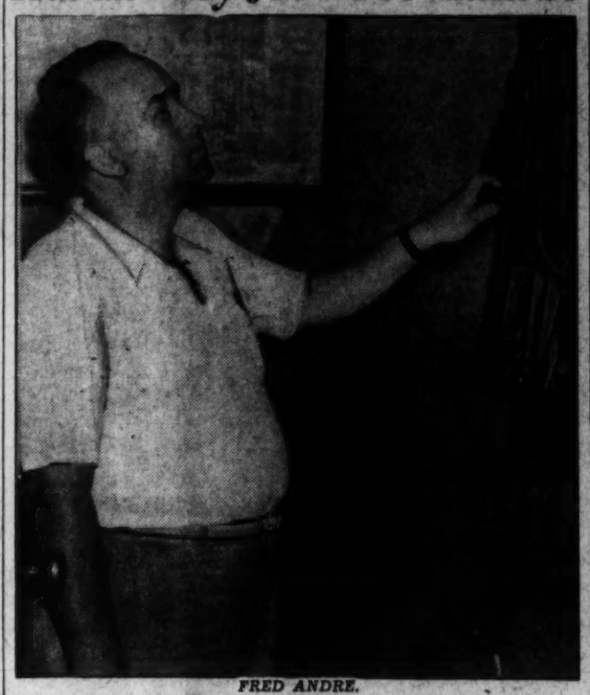
Farley Not Interested.

Seattle, July 28 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley, returning from an Alaskan tour, declined to comment today on a charge by Kentucky's State finance chairman, Dan Talbott, that Farley attempted to make a deal whereby United States Senator Logan would get a Federal judgeship, leaving the senatorial field open to Gov. A. B. Chandler.

"I'm not interested in the Kentucky primary," he told an interviewer.

Farley also declined to comment on a charge the Federal Farm Security Administration had used its franking privilege to dispense campaign propaganda.

Monument's Elevator Mechanic Has an Easy Job—Too Much So



FRED ANDRE.

Most of the Time He Just Stands By for Emergencies—but He Can Look Out Windows and Chuckle at Sightseeing Books.

It is one of the Capital's softest jobs, yet one of the hardest. It is one of the dullest, but one of the most interesting. It is the most uplifting, still rather depressing at times.

It is the job of elevator mechanic at the Washington Monument, the man who has the responsibility of keeping in perfect working order the shaft's single lift which takes 1,000,000 people up—and down—each year.

On duty yesterday was Fred Andre. After going thoroughly over the machine room, cables, shaft lights and everything else yesterday morning—it took a little over an hour—he had the rest of the day to himself. All he had to do was stand by for emergencies, and emergencies are few and far between as far as the elevator is concerned.

Paradoxically, the very softness of the job makes it odious to the mechanics. A new system has just been introduced under which they will take two-month shifts at playing nurse to the lift. One man had the assignment six years, which fed him up plenty. He has been transferred to the Commerce building's elevators.

Andre, who has been ministering to the monument's elevator for three years off and on, was on relief duty yesterday. But his two months' tour of duty is ecoming soon. He doesn't mind it. Not much, anyway.

He looks out the windows—there's always something new to see—checks over his equipment and sits to pass the time away. Funny remarks by sightseers also help.

There was the 6-year-old who, looking out one of the windows, said he could see Lincoln Memorial and the Capitol and the White House but where was Washington Monument. And the youngster who asked his mother wouldn't she buy him one of those toy autos he saw down below.

cial session of the Legislature to "suppress records and intimidate the testimony of State employes."

"Begged Me to Stay."

Earle, Democratic nominee for the United States Senate, retorted that Adams "quit the State service in a huff" because Percy W. Foote, a retired rear admiral, was selected to head the reorganized police force, with Adams second in command. Adams came back:

"You begged me to stay and you said that I would be the real head of the force and that Admiral Foote would be a figurehead on the job to keep John L. Lewis off my back."

Lewis entered a candidate in the spring primary for the gubernatorial nomination—but lost.

Adams said he also wished to "remind" the governor that he "quit" because—

"You wiped out the name of 'Pennsylvania State Police,' a name feared by criminals, respected by honest men, known throughout the world for its impartiality and efficiency, a name made illustrious by men who gave their lives for justice."

"Would Sacrifice Honor."

"You punished Capt. Samuel W. Gerhart for having restored peace and order at the Berkshire knitting mills in Berks County after a C. I. O. mob had murdered one man, injured a score or more persons, and destroyed several automobiles.

"You had proved to me that you would sacrifice the honor and position of a police officer for political expedience, and that under your command no police officer is secure in his position if he impartially enforces the law."

project recently, Ickes said, assuming the city still wanted it.

"We didn't make Boston file this application," Ickes continued. "The city had money to match Federal funds, but instead of going ahead with the project Mayor Tobin kicks us in the face."

At his press conference, Ickes called Tobin "discourteous" for failing to reply to two PWA inquiries as to whether the city still wanted the project, originally requested by former Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield in 1935.

Ickes said that "Tobin was going to economize and save money for the taxpayers, and instead of replacing the city hall which we had been told was falling down, he was going to Harry Hopkins and repair it, refurbish it and shine it up at less expense to Boston, but more expense to the Government."

Ickes added "We don't deal with individuals, we deal with communities. We thought that especially in Boston a government is a continuing thing not dependent on an individual official."

The Boston mayor, Ickes continued, "thought it was a fine opportunity to have the calcium strike, so he strutted on the stage and spurned this grant."

Now, the secretary said, the mayor "seems to have fallen between two stools." Ickes explained that he had not heard of any WPA funds being granted for renovation of the city hall.

Canada, U.S. To Put Aviation Pact in Force

Will Embark on Program Monday for Reciprocal Activity.

By the United Press.

The State Department announced last night that the United States and Canada will embark next Monday upon a new program to facilitate recirocal civil activities.

The new arrangements, which were drafted last January at a conference here between United States and Canadian officials, have been approved formally by the two governments, and an agreement was reached to put them into effect Monday, the State Department said.

The understanding covers various technical phases of air navigation, reciprocal issuance of airmen certificates, and reciprocal recognition of certificates of airworthiness of planes for exnort. Officials explained that the three-point program will greatly amplify and modernize the single understanding under the original 1929 agreement.

Under the air navigation agreement, each government will recognize flights over its territory by licensed pilots and aircraft of the other, and will assure them equality of treatment in aviation facilities.

Both governments can prohibit flights over military and other zones, and fliers must comply with local regulations, including those relating to customs and immigration. The planes also must be clearly marked for identification.

"Each country accords a general right of entry of aircraft of the other country, except that each may reserve for its own aircraft operations of a commercial nature wholly within its territory," the State Department said. "The right to conduct scheduled air transport services is subject to special understandings between the two governments to be arrived at in the future."

The arrangements provide that each country can issue certificates of competency and licenses to citizens of the other for piloting civilian aircraft.

State Department officials said the arrangements are similar to those between the United States and Denmark, Great Britain, Italy, Norway, Sweden, and South Africa, and on a less comprehensive scope with Germany, Belgium and Ireland.

An estate valued at $225,000 was left by George Addison King, who died last week after having been a resident of the District for more than 75 years, it was shown in District Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of his will was filed.

Each of four children are to share equally in the estate. They are Archibald King, George A. King, jr., Marion Edmonston Hinckley, and Elibazeth King Jones. The will authorized the law firm operated by Mr. King to continue the use of his name.

Treasury Lacks Debt Talk News

Acting Treasury Secretary Roswell Magill said yesterday that he had no information that Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, jr., is carrying on negotiations between the American, British and French treasuries on monetary and war debt measures.

"We have no information to support these rumors from London and Paris," he said. "We don't know of any such monetary conversations with England and France."

According to London reports, Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, is credited with initiating war debt conversations with Premier Chamberlain, while Morgenthau is conducting parleys in France.

'Gold Clause' Case Again Up to Court

By the Associated Press.

One of the famous "gold clause" cases decided by the Supreme Court in 1935 popped up again yesterday.

John M. Perry, New York attorney, made another effort to compel the Government to pay him $16,931 on a $10,000 bond payable in gold as a result of dollar devaluation.

His petition was dismissed by the Court of Claims on the basis of the Supreme Court decision that he had not proved any damage.

Perry told the Supreme Court if it would grant a review he would present facts "conclusively establishing" losses.

Two Power Bids Rejected by REA

Rural Electrification Administration rejected yesterday contracts proposed by two Washington power companies for sale of electricity to farm lighting projects in that State.

John Carmody, REA administrator, said some of the terms of the proffered contracts, submitted by the Washington Gas & Electric Co. and Puget Sound Power & Light Co., were "outrageous" and the rates were "unduly high."

tentative draft of legislation aimed to correct alleged evils of the administrative process.

Earlier in the day, on the recommendation of the bar association's resolutions committee, the assembly, subordinate branch of the association, had effectively killed resolutions which would have attacked Justice Hugo Black's right to his seat on the Supreme Court and condemned Nazi religious, political and racial persecution.

Action on the two resolutions was not debated. The resolution of Justice Black, submitted by Dean Edward T. Lee of Chicago's John Marshall Law School, proposed the A. B. A. president appoint a committee of five members who are practitoiners before the Supreme Court to contest Justice Black's position.

The contest would have been based on the constitutional provision against appointment of a Senator or Representative to an office which carried emoluments increased by Congressional action in which he participated.

Vote Is 67 to 16.

Without comment, the committee traced the results of two previous actions against Justice Black, relating them by implication to the present petition, and recommended defeat. Assembly support of the recommendation was by a vote of 67 to 16.

The anti-Nazi resolution, introduced by Charles C. Burlingham, of New York, which also praised Roosevelt's efforts in prompting world aid for refugees, was voted down by the resolutions committee because it involved "the present civil government of a foreign country, namely, Germany. In the opinion of the committee, the resolution relates to a subject which is not within the purview of the association."

Several bar association members commented privately the organization could hardly censure racial discrimination by others so long as it continued to bar colored lawyers from membership in the association.

In listing the general principles which should form the basis of legislation to check the "autocratic" powers of administrative agencies, the bar association's special committee on the subject reported:

"(1) As to rule making proceedure administrative agencies should be free to develop each its own basis of experience, except that publicity and authoritative promulgation should be required so as to make administrative rules as accessible as are rules of court. It should be considered also whether substantive rules should not merely be promulgated but brought affirmatively to the attention of the legislative body. As to this latter point it will not do to say that the line cannot be drawn between proceedural and substantive rules. This extreme of skepticism (not infrequently urged today) comes from those who believe law an illusion and would have an administrative absolutism.

"(2) Judicial preview of findings of fact should be preserved to the extent of ascertaining whether there has been a finding as distinguished from an arbitrary pronouncement, and whether that finding has a reasonable support in substantial evidence.

Fair Hearings Urged.

"(3) Judicial review should be jealously preserved to the extent of assuring due process of law by requiring a hearing of both sides, allowing each side to present its case fully and to meet fully everything to be used against it in arriving at a determination, precluding inspections with one party present and not the other, and interviews with representatives of one side in the absence of or without notice to the other.

"(4) Judicial review should be preserved to the extent of assuring action upon evidence rather than a preformed conception of the facts, and requiring determinations to proceed on the basis of full consideration of evidence and not on general ideas of expediency of getting things done.

"(5) Judicial review should be so limited as to insure (by requirement of record and findings) the three foregoing requirements, without substituting findings of fact or declarations of policy (within legal limits) by a court for findings or declarations committed by law to administrative agencies.

"6. There should be unification and simplificatoin of the modes of judicial review. So far as possible a notice of appeals, specifying the determination, ruling or order complained of, the grounds of objection thereto, and the relief sought, lodged with the commission, tribunal, board or administrative agency in question and provision for bringing up to the court the record of administrative action or requiring full disclosure of the nature and details of such action and the basis thereof, and the mode of arriving at any determination involved therein, should suffice.

"1. There should be some organizing of those who practice before the administrative tribunals and agencies whereby canons of practice in administrative proceedings may be developed and the discipline and sanctions which apply in practice before the courts may be adopted and made applicable to practice in such proceedings. It is, for example, a serious defect, involving much waste of time, that administrative tribunals cannot rely on statements made to them by practitioners before them as the courts can do. In view of the vast interests now committed to these tribunals and the want of general regulatoins as to practice before them, the demand for canons with sanction behind them and of disciplinary powers is manifest."

On the basis of these seven principles, the committee had drawn up a bill "to provide for the more expeditious settlement of disputes with the United States and for other purposes," including provisions for judicial review of the actions of "every department, independent establishment, board, commission authority, Government-owned corporation or other agency."

Because the text of the bill admittedly could be improved upon by further consideration before the next session of Congress, the House of Delegates recommitted it to the committee. Before doing this, however, the House voted to accept four recommendations of the committee, most notable of which was one approving extension of the Federal criminal code "to the rendering of any service or assistance of whatsoever character, with or without compensation, by any member of Congress, officer or employe of the United States, or national officer of a political party, before any administrative agency of the United States, or national officer of a political party, before any administrative agency of the United States for or on behalf of any person, corporation or business organization, in any matter involving a quasijudicial determination affecting individual rights."

The recommendation was aimed at political pressure on administrative tribunals and as written originally prohibited even State officers of political parties from appearing before regulatory bodies. This drew sharp criticism from several members of the House of Delegates, who foresaw either dropping a lucrative practice or withdrawal from politics looming for some lawyers.

State Officers Included.

The House of Delegates voted agreement with the idea the ban on potential political pressure on administration tribunals should not be extended to include State political officers, and the recommendation was so amended.

Another recommendation urged extension of a selective civil service to all other than cabinet officers and assistant secretaries of the departments engaged in quasi-judicial as distinguished from policy-making administrative activities. American law schools and the State bar associations were urged to pay more attention to the training of practitioners to appear before administrative agencies.

In presenting the report of the special committee on administrative law, Garfield pinch-hitted for Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of the Harvard Law School and chairman of the committee. Dean Pound is in South America.

No mention was made during the decision of the report today of the demand made by Jerome N. Frank, member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who on Monday had demanded that remarks in the report which he said "cast a slur" on the character of William P. Douglas, S. E. C. chairman be expunged.

The report of the association's committee on labor, employment and social security, which assailed both the national labor relations and the social security acts, was accepted and filed by the House of Delegates without any expression of opinion as to its recommendations for revision of the two acts.

An unusual debate developed over what recommendation the Bar Association should make to Congress as to the use of the $250,000 estate which the late Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes left to the Federal Government. A special committee recommended the funds be used to develop the Congressional Law Library by assembling a collection of works on jurisprudence to be known as "the Oliver Wendell Holmes Collection."

Douglas Arant, of Alabama, opposed adoption of the recommendation because of an alternative plan sponsored by close friends and associates of Justice Holmes, which would have established memorial scholarships for young law school students. It was stated during the debate that 27 of the 28 lawyers who had served as secretaries to the justice were agreed, as were the members of the Supreme Court who had been his closest friends, and his executor, John Palfrey, that he would not have liked to have his estate used to establish a Holmes Memorial Law Library.

When the issue was put to a vote, the House of Delegates voted to accept the report of the special committee.

Boy, 10, Drowned At Marshall Hall As Friends Watch

JOHN W. OSBORNE, Jr.,

With his friends from the Del Ray Baptist Church Sunday School gathered nearby, a ten-year-old boy, out on a picnic, tumbled from a dock and was drowned at Marshall Hall, Md., yesterday.

The boy was John Osborn, jr., of 214 West Windsor avenue, Alexandria, Va. He was the son of John Osborn, a stoker at the Central Heating Plant in Washington.

According to witnesses, the lad was holding a stick over the dock, pretending to fish. He and his friends were waiting for the steamer to take them back to Alexandria.

When the lad fell into the river, 23 feet deep at that point, a companion, Billy Ale, 17, of the 100 block of Custis avenue, Alexandria, plunged after him. The Ale boy and two employes at Marshall Hall were unable to reach him.

of $117,000 and a loan of $143,000 to construct and equip a hospital and administration buildings at the school. The estimated cost will be $260,000. With 567 inmates at the present time, the institution is overcrowded and unsanitary.

There has been no hospital there, and children who contract diseases often cannot be isolated from healthy children.

"We've been lucky in that we've had no epidemics," said Dr. James Lewald, superintendent, last night.

The administration section has been confined to the ground floor, with low ceilings and poor sanitation.

Other allotments made by Ickes yesterday were as follows:

Grant of $225,000 and loan of $275,000 to construct and equip a fire alarm central office building, and to repair, remodel and extend the existing fire alarm system to cost an estimated $500,000.

Grant of $341,125 and loan of $417,000 for improvements and additions to existing sewerage systems, and construction and equipping of a municipal garage to cost an estimated $758,625.

A grant of $212,000 to the National Park Service to remodel the Francis Scott Key Bridge to allow for extension under it on the Virginia side of George Washington parkway.

Total allotted to the District to date for seven projects is $4,893,625. Those previously allotted included a Municipal Court Building, Juvenile Court Building and a new ward for Gallinger Hospital. The District will have to repay $2,708,094 of the amount in 25 years; $2,397,531 is in direct grants.

Concerning the remainder of projects which the District Commissioners have submitted, Ickes said they "look like good projects." He would not indicate, however, what action will be taken on them in the future.

Applications have been submitted for $2,520,000 to start a Municipal Center; $300,000 for libaries; $1,600,000 for new jail; $2,750,000 for National Guard Armory; $3,814,375 for 16 schools; $880,000 for addition to Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md., and $300,000 to extend water and sewage systems at Lorton Reformatory, Va.

Money to be spent on sewers will be to repair and replace sections of the northwest boundary sewer, and the construction of sewers to separate domestic sewage from storm water in Klingle Valley, Good Hope road and Macomb street areas. A one-story garage for the city refuse division is also in present plans.

Work on the Key Bridge will make the Rosslyn end symmetrical with the District end. Clearing the dirt will allow space for the parkway to go underneath the bridge.

Work was started yesterday on paving the parkway from Columbia Island to the Key Bridge. Future appropriations will be necessary to actually carry the parkway under the bridge and farther to the north to Great Falls.

were presented by the office of the late John Russell Pope.

"There wasn't any argument on this item," Settle said.

The Fine Arts Commission is strongly opposed to erection of the marble monument along the south bank of the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park, where it will go, by decision of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission.

Meeting independently yesterday morning, the planning group voted a plan which, in effect, will make Independence avenue a monumental twin to Constitution avenue. Independence avenue (formerly B street southwest), will, by the planners' action, be converted into a 60-foot roadway between South Capitol and Twelfth streets. This already has been done between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets.

It was prescribed the building line of Independence avenue shall be 90 feet from the center of the thoroughfare, and, on the north, 100 feet. Between Third and Fourth streets, where the new Social Security Board Building is to be erected, the avenue width will be 70 feet.

Ground plans for the Social Security structure, its "twin," the Railroad Retirement Board Building, and the new War Department Building were approved. They were submitted by L. A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury.

Objects to Tower.

Caemmerer said the Fine Arts Commission objected to the 230-foot tower which will be the central motif of the new Naval Medical Center soon to be built on the Rockville pike, above Bethesda, Md.

"It is not in keeping with the landscape," he said. Settle declared the planning body felt very much the same way about the matter. So the Navy will give the tower further study.

The planning commission, however, said it is satisfied with the site chosen for the center, to which the Naval Hospital and Medical School will be removed.

Plans submitted by the Bureau of Public Roads for an additional arch on Key Bridge, beneath which the George Washington Memorial Parkway will pass, and roadway improvement on Columbia Island Plaza were approved by the parks group.

Reviewing accomplishments of the last session of Congress, Settle said "it was one of the most important ever held with respect to development of the National Capital." Among its highlights, he said, were enactment of a modern zoning law, extension of the Anacostia Parkway, allotment of $625,000 for extension of parks and playground purchases and granting of appropriations for many Federal and District buildings.

At its private meeting, the Fine Arts Commission reiterated its advocacy of keeping John Marshall Place open in connection with the Municipal Center project. This must be done, said Caemmerer, to preserve unity with the Mall and the Federal building triangle, as well as for the convenience of traffic.

Approval was given Sculptor James E. Fraser's model for the Gallatin statue, to be placed on the west side of the Treasury Building, and the model for a memorial plaque which the Italian World War Veterans of the United States will install in the Arlington Amphitheater.

Lardner Son Reported Injured on Spain Front

Barcelona, July 28 (AP).—James P. Lardner, 24-year-old son of the late Ring Lardner, was reported today as among the loyalist wounded on the Ebro River front in the Gandesa area.

A dispatch from the front said he was hit in the back by fragments of a bomb. His condition was described as "not serious."

He gave up newspaper work in April to enlist.

Hitler Anxious for Air Pact, Chamberlain Hints to British

matic correspondents stuck to their stories, and German correspondents canceled plans to go away for the bank holiday week-end. They recalled the foreign office was not informed when Wiedemann came here previously.

Whether Wiedemann comes now or later there is no doubt talk of an aerial pact is once more in the air. Cynics think Hitler may be dangling a pact as bait to win the British completely over to the side of the Sudeten Germans. Until then, unless the Germans have their way in Bohemia, the air pact is not likely to progress beyond the stage of talk. Hitler has mentioned air pact possibilities from time to time in his speeches, usually when he has reason to wish to be particularly friendly to the British.

Only this week Chamberlain praised Hitler for his part in the signing of the Anglo-German Naval Treaty, by which Germany agrees not to build her navy beyond 35 per cent of the size of the British navy. Chamberlain would welcome another treaty in which the British air force would be allowed parity with the German.

Unfortunately, an air pact would be harder to enforce than a naval pact. It is fairly easy for naval attaches and spies to check on battleships and cruisers, submarines and destroyers, as they are constructed, more or less, in the open and are impossible to conceal altogether. Bombing planes, however, are built indoors with elaborate secrecy.

Following the example of the London Naval Treaty, to which the United States is a party, the solution may be sought in qualitative limitation instead of quantitative. The powers could try to agree not on the total number of planes, but on their maximum tonnage, maximum armament and maximum engine power.

U. S. Battleship New York Snaps Propeller Shaft

The battleship New York, bringing 500 midshipmen back from a European training cruise, has broken a propeller shaft and is proceeding at reduced speed, it was learned at the Navy Department last night.

Commanded by Rear Admiral W. Johnson, the training squadron, composed of the Wyoming, Texas and New York, was scheduled to arrive at Hampton Roads, Va., on August 6.

It was understood the New York will be left to limp into port, and the other two vessels will maintain their schedule.

More Trouble For Japan.

The decided change for the worse in Japan's international position, as a consequence of the undeclared war on China, is sharply reflected in the stiffening attitude now displayed toward the island empire by both Russia and Great Britain.

Just over a year ago the Soviet Union backed down when confronted on the Amur by Japan's armed might. The other day, when a similar border dispute arose along the Manchukuo-Siberian frontier, it was Japan's turn to back down in the face of Russia's strongly voiced determination to stay put.

And now Great Britain, too, indicates that the time for letting Japan get away with it is over. Speaking in the House of Lords this week, Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, threatened Japan with "possible action" if the Tokyo government continues to trespass on British interests in China. And he further indicated that Great Britain is considering ways of giving assistance to China.

This is a far cry from the timorous attitude displayed by the London government at the time of the murderous assault by Japanese fliers on the person of Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, Britain's ambassador to China. Times have changed. Japan's increasing difficulties are now so patent that the policy of retreat pursued by all the outside powers in the Far East at the time the undeclared war broke out is now being generally abandoned.

Still unable to bring China to its knees, Japan must now increasingly reckon with powerful governments, including our own, no longer willing to permit the Japanese militarists to violate every treaty obligation at will. And what has been said to Tokyo so far is only preliminary to the guarantees which should be exacted from Japan when the time comes for a final settlement in the Far East.

Careful Planning.

Plans for the development of Independence avenue southwest have been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission sitting in joint session. When realized, this project will equip Washington with a virtual duplicate of Constitution avenue, which it will parallel for several blocks on the south side of the Mall. The usefulness of Constitution avenue as a traffic artery is sufficient recommendation for this complementary improvement.

The two commissions also determined the building lines for the twin structures planned for the Social Security Board and the Railroad Retirement Board. This action follows the planning experts' advice and its logic will be readily appreciated by Washingtonians. To begin with, the location of these buildings in the Southwest should help to restore the prestige of the neighborhood as a residential area.

The removal, too, of Government building activities away from the congested "Federal triangle" area is a welcome development. The concentration of half a dozen major Government bureaus and departments within a few narrow blocks in the very heart of the city has proved a sorry mistake. Even in the relatively open Southwest area, the parking problem will still be a challenge to architects.

Another point that may well be borne in mind by the designers of the two new buildings is the desirability of keeping them low. Otherwise the grand vista of the Capitol and Washington generally now to be seen from the river will be lost.

Worth Considering.

Receivers for the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railway have offered to sell its right of way, from the District Line to Baltimore and from Annapolis Junction to Annapolis, for $75,000. The Maryland State Roads Commission is considering the proposal, which appears to have many advantages.

There is no question that additional roads are needed in this area. That need was emphasized in the regional planning report covering the W. B. A. triangle, prepared for the Maryland State Planning Commission. The experts who made this study, with the assistance of officials from the National Resources Committee recommended immediate construction of two major parkways on new rights of way between Washington and Baltimore and Washington and Annapolis.

The route taken by the defunct electric line would provide the shortest connection between Washington and Baltimore, with a direct cutoff road into Annapolis. Moreover, Chairman Beall of the State roads commission says that the cost of constructing the proposed highway would amount to only a fraction of the sum required to cut, grade and surface a new road along the route.

In view of the probable economies to be achieved it seems strange that the regional planning report did not refer to the possible utilization of the abandoned W. B. & A. roadbed. Unless there are objections to the plan not now apparent its acceptance might well serve to reduce traffic congestion, save money and afford some benefit to the creditors of the bankrupt electric line.

Tobacco Growers Resist.

Many farmers are likely to follow the lead of the Georgia and Florida tobacco growers who are resisting the payment of penalties for marketing crops in excess of their AAA allotments. Severe restrictions have been placed upon tobacco growers. It is natural and desirable that they should demand judicial test of the Government's authority to enforce such far-reaching orders.

Undoubtedly these or similar cases will be carried to the Supreme Court. Thanks to recent legislation, the constitutionality of the 1938 farm act can be tested without the delays encountered in the case of the first AAA. More than two and a half years elapsed between the enactment of the agricultural adjustment act of 1933 and its invalidation by the Supreme Court. During that time revolutionary changes in American agriculture were brought about by means which the court eventually defined as unconstitutional.

The long delay in testing the first AAA was alone sufficient to make the final outcome chaotic. Presumably, efforts will be made to avoid a similar confusion in the present instance. The temporary restraining orders against the AAA in Georgia and Florida have been granted by State courts. Since a constitutional issue has been raised, however, the cases will probably soon be transferred to Federal district courts. There they will be heard before a panel of three judges, in accord with a recent act of Congress.

Decisions of such tribunals on questions of constitutionality may now be carried directly to the Supreme Court. It might be possible, therefore, to secure a final decision on this vital issue before the statute has been on the books a year. But that will depend largely upon the attitude of the Department of Justice. It will be interesting to note whether that department will in this case put its precept of speedy justice into practice.

On the other hand, no one would wish unduly to rush a decision of such obvious significance. A somewhat different Supreme Court invalidated the 1933 act, based upon the Federal taxing power, despite the fact that the AAA, in the words of the Court, "purchased" compliance with its crop curtailment plans. The present act is based upon the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. Not only does the new AAA "purchase" compliance; in the case of basic crops it virtually compels farmers to restrict their marketings by imposing penalty taxes, when and if approved by two-thirds of the growers.

If this act should be upheld it would leave in the hands of Congress tremendous powers over farming, and by implication over industry also. If, on the other hand, it is found to be unconstitutional, the result would almost certainly be impetus to constitutional amendment. The farmers of Georgia and Florida have started a movement out of which history may be made.

Bright New World.

United by nature, the United States and Latin America have long been kept divided by ignorance. For the most part the people of this Nation have had only the haziest notion of the history, culture, traditions, aspirations and psychology of our neighbors to the south. And they in turn have a frequently distorted picture of the United States, its people and its institutions.

This lack of understanding has often led to misunderstandings which have held back the fulfillment of the century-old dream of Pan-Americanism. Fortunately this situation is now by way of being corrected. The republics of the New World are steadily strengthening and increasing the bonds of peace and fellowship that unite them. And, concurrently, there is increasing eagerness, both in this country and in Latin America, to know each other better.

The Pan American Union, as well as many private organizations and agencies, have done extremely useful work in promoting and satisfying that desire. Now the governments concerned, carrying out a resolution adopted at the Buenos Aires conference, are also doing their bit for better understanding between the republics of the New World.

The United States, for its part, has just inaugurated a new division of cultural relations in the Department of State. While the activities of this division will not necessarily be limited to Latin America, improved cultural relations with our southern neighbors will be its principal aim for the time being. It will seek through the exchange of professors and students, through making known our achievements in the field of art, literature and music, and in other educational ways to give Latin-Americans a better idea of this country and its people. The official assertion that this is in no sense propaganda is amusing. Of course it is propaganda, but of an open and honorable variety.

Pan-Americanism is now clearly more than a banquet phrase. It is a matter of national policy to which the present Administration is giving concentrated attention. The recently announced plan of the Export-Import Bank to finance certain trade transactions with Haiti, and prospectively with Brazil, does not necessarily betoken extension to Latin America as a whole. But it is a further straw indicating the Government's determination to strengthen international ties, of every kind, in the area affected by the Monroe Doctrine.

Minimum Wages In Action.

It would be a mistake to conclude that the investigation into alleged "chiseling" on the part of restaurant proprietors means a breakdown in the local minimum wage system for that business. A number of complaints from waitresses have been received by the board. But there is no evidence of wholesale violations. The inquiry ordered by the District Minimum Wage Board appears to be largely a precautionary move.

The most prevalent complaint seems to be that some employers are deducting the price of three meals from waitresses' salaries, regardless of whether their hours of work are such that they would normally eat three meals while on the job. The board contemplated that the price of two meals per day should be deducted. If the minimum wage agreement has been misinterpreted on this point, it should be a simple matter to set the matter straight.

Minimum wage scales fixed for other local industries appear to be operating satisfactorily. The board has no evidence of girls being laid off because employers have been compelled to raise their pay. The great majority of employers are said to have manifested a sympathetic and co-operative attitude. Since employes, too, were disposed to compromise, all of the minimum wage scales for local industries have been fixed by unanimous decision of conferences representing employes, employers and the public.

Nevertheless, the board is well advised to keep a close check upon observance of the agreement which each industry has accepted. If the minimum wages already fixed should be found to work a hardship upon either employes or employers the whole subject can be restudied and necessary adjustments made. Sharp changes in the cost of living would make such changes essential.

In this respect, the local board has an obvious advantage over the wage-hour division now being set up in the Department of Labor. Its definite task is to assure women workers a standard of living that will protect their health and morals. No such objective will guide the administrators of the national law. They will have to start with an arbitrary minimum wage for the entire country and make adjustments to meet local conditions, so far as that is possible.

The local board can hear complaints, order investigations and set machinery in motion for the fixing of new rates at any time this may appear desirable. No such flexibility and careful supervision can be expected in the national system. It is questionable whether any national wage-hour law can be administered so as to avoid hardships resulting from varying conditions, costs of living and local industrial practices.

The Chilmona Family.

Our first impulse was to waggle an admonitory finger at Dr. S. O. Mast of the Johns Hopkins University. He is, naturally, not to blame for having met the chilmonas at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass. One meets all sorts at seaside resorts. But was it necessary for him to cultivate their acquaintance so intimately? Was it exactly the proper thing to do to dive into their family histories and to publish such startling facts with so little reserve? We wonder.

The chilmonas, it appears, are in the business of manufacturing starch and fat, two of the three essential foods, the third being protein. Under nature's competitive system they have to date held their own; but one fears that once they appreciate their capabilities as outlined by Dr. Mast, they may get out of hand.

Dr. Mast says that if their factories ran to full capacity and without mishap they could in a month produce enough starch and fat to cover the State of Massachusetts with a layer 90 feet thick; or to put it another way, to provide every individual in the United States with 70 tons of starch and 20 tons of fat; which, as anybody will admit, is a bit thick, and a trifle too much.

The chilmonas are microscopic water animals who play life's game by doubling every deal; they split in two and keep on splitting. And Dr. Mast has discovered evidence that they possess a queer substance which not only causes them to reproduce prodigiously but which also has power to stop the wild growth. This, Dr. Mast says, "obviously is of the greatest importance in all problems concerning growth (including cancer) and in reproduction and senescence."

So, after all, it may be that Dr. Mast deserves the accolade rather than the admonitory finger.

"Socialized" Medicine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The courts have agreed that the group health idea is legal. Why should it not be? If a group of people who believe in the same system of medical practice arrange to pay a certain monthly fee, and a group of doctors agree to serve them on a salary, there should be some great advantages in such an arrangement. Each member could select his choice of doctor in that group. One writer well says in a letter to The Post: "The character of a physician is the same regardless of whether he is paid by salary or fee."

Many, if not most, scientific men are on a salary and I have not noticed that that has any tendency to make them less interested or efficient in their work. I should think it would be the same with physicians. If a doctor has no worry about a fluctuating income, I should think he could work better with less worry.

Many people have the "sick habit." For every headache and stomach ache they run to their doctor, and it makes them feel better if he only pats them on the back and tells them they have nothing to worry about. For such people the group health idea would save money.

There might be group health associations and also independant doctors for those who don't need a doctor so often, as there are corporation lawyers and individual lawyers who prefer to be independent.

Some doctor's fees in maternity cases today are so steep that I don't see how the poorer classes can have any children at all without going deeply in debt! If this group health idea can serve them it will be a great blessing.

I believe in entire medical freedom for all recognized systems of medicine, otherwise advance in the healing art would be blocked. There has been too much unfair political action by the American Medical Association to suppress other systems of medicine.

The South's Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The South needs no more defense than the rest of the Nation. However, it needs to be given the parity and justice accorded other sections and to be spared the apologies of Southern inferiority complexes.

Ever since colonial days there has been a division of interests between the North and South—a more aggressive North desiring to dominate the more easy-going South. The North has wanted to force the South to adopt its "yardstick," regardless of differences of the respective natural resources and climatic conditions.

The growth and development of the United States depends upon every section of the Nation having equal rights to take advantage of nature's gifts. In a democracy there is no place for a Northern, Western or Southern "yardstick." Nor is there any justification for a New Deal Administration setting up a national "yardstick"—especially one as developed and operated by the Wallaces, Hopkins, Ickeses, Perkins, the TVA triumvirate and their host of assistants.

Not just the South but every liberty-loving American must demand the right of democratic government, not centralized, bureaucratic, one-man rule reducing all but the favored to the status of guinea pigs.

More Refugees?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to the letter by John Stirton in the July 22 issue of The Post.

How many hundred years does he think it takes this Nation, our United States, to become a distinct country? We who are descendants of those who fought for freedom and liberty do not feel that Europe's refugees should be dumped upon our shores. We have our own economic and unemployment problems without being burdened with more refugees.

A Doctor's Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much praise to Mr. Westbrook Pegler for his timely article, "V. D. Patients." Such an article coming at this the conclusion of the National Health Conference is really a word of encouragement to many of us physicians. He who by virtue of hard work, denials, and perseverance secures the right to practice medicine is now harassed from all sides.

There are many physicians in this country who are barely existing due to the ever-increasing free clinics. Many of those patients who attend these free clinics are people who can afford to pay. Nevertheless, by processes of deceptions well known to the average physician they secure free services and treatments. It is not the big doctor who suffers, but the smaller fellow who gives his services several hours each day.

If the Administration is considering aid to the sick, why not consider aid to the doctors who must struggle for an existence due to the fact that these free organizations set up by them work to their own detriment in this age of keen competition? Also, why not investigate many of these so-called charity patients who clutter the clinics to the exclusion of those who are genuinely in need of help?

I trust that more of such articles by Mr. Pegler, who apparently is an unbiased and well-informed writer, will appear. They will really awaken the public and the Administration to much of the existing evils against many true-hearted members of a worthy profession.

Johnson Grass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ever since the lamented Blue Eagle was so unceremoniously heaved out the window by the Supreme Court, the New Deal has been groping its way in the gloom without a suitable emblem to express the hopes and ambitions of the faithful devotees of the new philosophy. Such a symbol has now been turned up by the former Ohio Republican who last week took Texas by storm. Not even the plucked and battered old bird itself could half so well represent the aims and accomplishments of the politicians and bureaucrats comprising the setup in official Washington.

Nothing could be more gratifying to look at than a luxuriant stand of Johnson grass, or might more readily fool the uninitiated. I had a small patch of Johnson grass on my 10-acre ranch in the Sacramento Valley in California. I tried for years to eradicate it. It looked so green and tempting it was hard to understand why the stock would not eat it. But I kept the cow and horses tethered for hours on the spot when everything else around was dry and parched, and they would gnaw the dried grasses into the ground and never touch the beautiful greens. I have seen thousands of acres of the finest vineyards on the great Stanford Ranch—in the rich Sacramento River bottoms—completely ruined by the pest.

I hope that none of our Maryland or Virginia farmers (or politicians) will be misled by the forage idea to introduce the nuisance here. I'm sure it wouldn't make even a satisfactory campaign issue in these parts.

Rights Of Way.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I ask, in the name of all that is fair and reasonable, why autos, and especially taxicabs, are allowed to monopolize and obstruct the right of way of the streetcars, as they are apparently now allowed to do without let or hindrance?

It seems very unfair both to the streetcar companies and to their patrons.

Mr. Coleman Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. E. Barr, of Washington, challenges my recent article to this column regarding Mr. Franklyn Waltman's writings as publicity director of the Republican National Committee.

The gentleman seems resigned to the fact that the early portion of the New Deal program was fine, but describes the later undertakings as an "abysmal failure." Let us therefore take inventory of the situation. Perhaps the gentleman has reference to the NRA and the AAA when he refers to the early glories of the New Deal. If this be the case it should be noted that the Supreme Court unanimously ruled against the former measure and voted 6 to 3 against the latter.

The new wages and hours law has supplanted the Blue Eagle insofar as minimum wages and maximum hours are concerned, and the soil conservation and domestic allotment act and the new farm measure have taken place of the AAA. These measures apparently are within the framework of the Constitution. If the writer by any chance is referring to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Securities and Exchange Commission he will note that these agencies are still in full force and effect.

Reading on I find that Mr. Barr states ". . . Mr. Waltman can never hope to keep up with the coterie of masters employed by the New Deal with public funds." Is the gentleman not hinting just a trifle at the incompetence of dear old Franklyn? Well, I for one think the Republican director is quite a clever fellow, but you can't make a "silk purse out of a sow's ear" and Mr. Waltman can't make a case against the New Deal for the same reason.

Finally I would like to have a word about that "gullible" majority which favors Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal. It has always been my conception of a democracy as that form of government which relies upon the judgment of the masses of the people to choose appropriate representatives to act for them. However, if one cannot trust the people to make a wise choice in such an instance then he believes not in a democracy, but rather in an oligarchy. It was the latter situation that faced young Thomas Jefferson when he entered the political arena. He believed the people were capable of choosing their own representatives in government. Such an attitude was opposed vigorously by the reactionaries of his time, but democracy won in the bitter struggle which ensued.

Tree Spraying Procedure.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that irate "Burleith Victim" has no reason to become so upset because his car received its thirteenth annual spraying, in view of the fact that he admittedly observed and disregarded the A. A. A. warnings posted on the trees. It is obvious that for 13 years "B. V." has been sticking his neck out and has been getting exactly what he has invited.

However, for "B. V.'s" information, although the generous cooperation of the A. A. A. makes the printing of these warning signs possible (no District funds being available for this purpose), they are posted by tree department employes and the trees are sprayed within 48 hours thereafter, weather permitting.

For "B. V.'s" further information, the practice of closing car windows, moving cars around the corner, etc., during spraying operations had to be stopped because some unappreciative car owners objected and had the men arrested for their efforts. It seems there is a law against opening or moving other people's cars, regardless of how honorable the intention.

In all fairness to these hard-working men who have a very difficult job to do, I feel this word in their defense is necessary.

The Post Impressionist

Poet And Peasant.

PROBABLY the poet has lost his head, for he was a knave in the Spanish deck of cards, much too preoccupied with the problem of epicurean living to try to double-cross destiny.

If my fears are true, I am certain the ghost of his head haunts every remaining cafe and bodega in Catalonia, and goes on wraith benders down in Andalusia, drinking gargantuan portions of sherry, quaffing beer after beer and sipping martinis no end, despite the occasional bombs bursting in air.

It may be the poet was on the wrong side of the barricades. In that case he was taken out and shot, and no doubt glad of it. Or he was put in jail, where the food was not quite the sort he gorged himself on in happier days in his palatial club, near Hotel Oriente, in Barcelona.

There remains the possibility that he might have been sitting obstinately in an easy chair, glass in hand, in that drapery-hung, plush-carpeted club, when Franco's bombers roared over the city from their base in Mallorca. The club certainly might have looked like a military objective. And a bomb must have come whistling down, in which case there is no doubt the poet's hand remained clasped around his glass, even though the head went rolling away somewhere like a croquet ball.

"You must meet this fellow," Ramon told me in happier days, when everything was delightful confusion over the new republic and the new democratic Spain.

"I think he is the greatest poet in Spain. He is also a great drinker. I want to see if you can match him drink for drink."

"Is he a long-haired poet?" I asked.

"No, senor," sighed Ramon, "he is bald as an egg!"

The poet sat in the lounge of the club. He was paunchy, yet he rose with a sort of native grace and bowed. He pressed a button, and a waiter appeared with double-martinis.

"Salud," toasted the poet, "salud a la Republica."

After the third martini the poet found his tongue.

Yes, he agreed, the Republic might be an excellent thing. It did not matter to him, so long as there were publishers and a luxurious club in which he might lounge and greet friends now and then. He had always been a poet, he confided. His father had been an editor, but his grandfather, who raised bulls, furnished the fire in his soul. The poet then explained his grandfather, who, incidentally, was a Carlist, had been the most profane man in Asturias, a Paul Bunyan of invective, so that for days even the priests would not speak to him.

"But," the poet remarked, "let us finish our drinks and have dinner."

The poet talked on, over asparagus dipped in olive oil. There was certain to be a lot of trouble about the Republic. He hoped not. But then, as a Spaniard, he could never imagine a placid Spain. A placid Spain, he continued, over a cold broiled partridge, soaked in vinegar, would be like water in wine.

No doubt, he added, as he sipped his sherry, the officers in the army would become bored. It might be a few years. No doubt the landowners would buy up the officers until the time was ripe to seize the state back. The clergy would help. The old order changeth, but its heart still beat on the right side, instead of the left, the poet opined.

If Alfonso had not been King there might never have been a revolution, the poet asserted, over his fifth benedictine.

"The King," he observed, "has spent enough of the people's money at Biarritz to build an entire system of highways, and a thousand new schools. His bills for a single day would keep me in liquor for life."

Spaniards, the poet explained, will not stand for a dictatorship, even if it be of their own making. Juan March, the tycoon, never could buy them, even if some day he could buy a war. The Duke of Alba might buy influence politically, but not enough. The gold in the Bank of Spain was the people's gold—piled up through centuries of conquest, colonization and robbery, if you please.

The poet drank deeply, wiped his thick lips with a napkin, and shook his head.

"I am afraid in a few years the people's gold may be expended defending the people's rights. And, do you know, sometimes I believe it may be used to finance a people's army, because I feel this is the beginning, and there is going to be war."

It was late afternoon and manuelas clattered in the street outside. The poet swayed slightly. He intended to do nothing about his predictions, he said

"There are comfortable chairs, senor, and good drinks, and as long as this is true, I do not give a damn what happens. I am going to take a nap so I can start drinking again this evening."

"Which do you prefer most," I asked the poet, "drinking, eating or associating with lovely ladies?"

"First," replied the poet, "I prefer drinking. Then I prefer eating. Then I prefer drinking."

Fair Enough

Price Of Fame.

THE Cincinnati Post reports that Johnny Vander Meer, the young athlete who pitched two no-hit games for the Reds, is demanding 50 per cent of the proceeds of newspaper and magazine articles in praise of himself for which he supplies the material.

Cincinnati papers are happily exempt from this charge, and he will gladly give them interviews free. This is a large leak in Vander Meer's commercialism, because there would seem to be nothing to prevent the use of laudatory matter intended for local consumption in articles for sale elsewhere. Idolatry is never libelous, and common knowledge in Cincinnati is common knowledge everywhere.

Nevertheless, certain Cincinnati newspaper writers are deeply hurt, feeling that Vander Meer has snapped at a hand extended to pet him and munched it clear up to the shoulder. Not overpaid at best, some of them have had a chance to make a few dollars spreading the fame of a hero, and the young man's demands would cut their $10 and $20 fees in half.

The remainder would hardly pay them for their trouble, and the result would be a self-imposed embargo on Johnny Vander Meer unless the writers warmed over their local material and used it for the export trade. If this has not occurred to them, then ingenuity is on the decline in Cincinnati journalism.

• • • •

SOME OF my colleagues seem to think that this is something new in commercialism, but I can assure them that Johnny Vander Meer is following distinguished precedent. Only recently President Roosevelt placed on sale as by-product of the distinguished office which he adorns the record of his conversations with the press and, only as an afterthought and apparently in response to criticism announced that the proceeds would be devoted to some public work.

Jess Willard, when he was heavyweight champion of the world, once declined to give your correspondent his thoughts on the eve of a struggle with Frank Moran, which turned out to be an exhibition of mass reticence, on the ground that Mr. Hearst was paying him $50,000 a year for the exclusive right to this commodity. Greater thinkers have been paid less, but your correspondent had to admit that Mr. Willard's mother did not raise a foolish son in raising Jess when he said: "Why should I tell you what I think for nothing when Mr. Hearst is paying me $50,000 a year to tell him what I think?"

But your correspondent's mother did not raise any foolish children, either, and in a subtle battle of wits between two intellectual titans, Mr. Willard was first diverted into trivialities, then exasperated into a discussion of his plan of battle which was presently given eternal permanence in the five-star finals under a line which truthfully said that the following thoughts had been expressed at a late hour today "By Jess Willard." He had given away perhaps $5,000 worth of thought resenting a suggestion that Moran was braver, although, of course, the interview might have been appraised at a somewhat smaller figure as collateral at Morgan's bank.

Some celebrities are just that way.

THERE WAS a mysterious woman witness in a murder case around here a few years ago who got $20 from a Hearst journalist for an exclusive signed story of what she had seen on the night of the carnage, and thereafter told a fresh version of what she had seen—all in a flash of lightning, incidentally—every night for about a week. The lady had never been in literature before, but she showed a distinct change of style from day to day, and she had the imagination of a born fictioneer.

Moreover, she had the business acumen of a Charles Dickens, for she always had to have the money in the pocket of her apron before she would tell each version of what she saw by the flash of lightning that night.

Papa Dionne, whose sudden rise to celebrity might have caught a less wary man flat-footed, brilliantly foiled all who would have chiseled a profit from his own remarkable achievement without declaring him in. He was at his best, perhaps, in his colloquy with a refrigerator agent who wanted to install a magnificent ice machine, free, to cool the children's milk in return for a photograph of the Quintuplets and Papa admiring this miracle.

"But thees machine," the agent argued, attempting pidgin French, "thees machine, she's good for you and the enfants. Good for you. Good. Good."

"Yeah," said Papa Dionne. "Pretty good for you, too, eh?"

• • • •

BUT FAME is fleeting, and perhaps in a year Johnny Vander Meer will be pleased to see his name in print, even in the fine type of the record books. When "Trudy" Ederle returned from her victory over the English Channel it took hours to persuade Dudley Field Malone, her manager, to let her accept, free, a red roadster on which she had set her heart in return for her picture at the wheel of the same.

Dudley wouldn't think twice on the same proposition today. He might even accept a red roadster, free himself if approached with dignity.

Europe Peace Outlook Brighter 24 Years After War's Opening

Britain And Germany Again Hold The Keys To Possible Strife; Pact Between Them Expected To Limit Air Armaments.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 28.—Efforts to rid Europe of her chief menaces to peace were gaining ground today—just 24 years after the first World War declaration.

There were brighter prospects for a halt in the feverish rearmament race.

Today—as in 1914 when Austria-Hungary, backed by Germany, launched a war on Serbia that brought on the general conflict—Britain and Germany are the key powers in the European situation.

A friendly turn in the relations of these two powers bolstered European statesmen's hopes of averting a repetition of events 24 years ago.

Britain's move to mediate the Czechoslovak minority quarrel—with German consent—promised to lead to broader political talks between the two big powers.

Air Pact Expected.

An air pact, limiting armament in this field upon which both nations have been concentrating, was believed in some quarters to be high on the agenda of these negotiations.

Such was hinted by Prime Minister Chamberlain himself when he praised the British-German naval agreement in Parliament Tuesday and called it proof the two countries could reach an understanding on vital problems.

Reports Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, Adolf Hitler's adjutant, was returning to London this week-end to resume talks with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, led to a belief in some quarters he was coming to discuss prospects for an air pact.

Britain gave new evidence, however, her present vast rearmament program will not slacken until threatening Spanish civil war and Czechoslovakia problems are nearer a solution.

Men Lured to Army.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, war secretary, promised fester promotions and other features to attract more men into the army he is revolutionizing.

He announced lower retirement ages and higher retirement pay, estimated to cost an additional $1,800,000 annually in first years of the plan's operation and increase to an extra $3,000,000 a year over 20 to 25 years.

Immediate effect of the changes, which are in line with the foreign secretary's policy of injecting more young blood into the army command, will be the promotion of more than 2,000 officers August 1.

Progress in another phase of Britain's defense program was reported by Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, who promised speedy action on plans for evacuating the civilian population of London and other cities in the event of war.

On the diplomatic front, Britain's new armed strength is leading to a bolder course. Mediation in the Czechoslovak question has been declared entirely unofficial, but observers considered it evidence Britain is taking a more active part in continental problems.

A stiffened attitude toward both Japan and Italy was seen in Parliament speeches this week by Chamberlain and Lord Halifax.

Germany's Ambitions.

Berlin, July 28 (AP).—Germany, 24 years after the start of the World War, finds herself once more in a position to exert aggressive influence on Europe's destiny and just as ambitious as ever for power.

The war, with its peace terms, led Germany into dire economic and political straits, but it also nourished an incipient national socialistic movement now in its sixth year of control.

Under this Nazi regime the Germans are told they have regained their pride, their boldness, their greatness.

Adolf Hitler took Europe by surprise after it had settled down into the delusive security of post-war peace.

With the support of the masses, he rearmed Germany and flaunted the Treaty of Versailles so effectively it has become a mere memory to Germany of "injustice and shame." New military alliances have been cemented. New friendships have been formed.

By uniting Austria with the Reich Hitler re-established the nation in terms of population and territory on a par with its wartime status.

Germany bears international weight again because she is a first class military power. Nazis themselves, with rearmament progressing rapidly, boast the fatherland has a mightier arm than ever.

Germany's strength, however, and the economic endurance of the nation itself, already on a virtual wartime basis of substitutes, remain a moot point.

The "Flying Fortresses" will replace three smaller bombers originally scheduled to make the flight.

Third Term Talk

By Ernest Lindley

Mr. Roosevelt And 1940.

THERE are subjects on which President Roosevelt is capable of keeping his thoughts strictly to himself. But if he really wants a third term as President he has not hinted as much to his closest associates. All his actions and words, including his allusions to his plans on returning to private life, have implied that he expects to leave the Presidency in January, 1941.

How much weight the tradition that a President shall not seek a third term carries with either Mr. Roosevelt or the rank and file of the electorate is an open question. There are more substantial reasons why he could earnestly wish to retire at the end of a second term. Although he is still in his prime and he enjoys being President, probably more than most of his predecessors, he must long for a respite from the relentless exactions of the office. He has accomplished enough already to give him as much assurance as any man can have at the time that he will go down in history as one of the great Presidents. His popularity seems to have weathered a sharp economic recession and a period of inaction which probably marked the low point of his two Administrations. Probably any President would prefer to retire, as Mr. Coolidge did, while he is as near as possible to the peak of his prestige.

HERE AND THERE in Mr. Roosevelt's official family there may be a job-holder, conscious that he is overpriced, who ardently hopes that Mr. Roosevelt will seek a third term. Many of Mr. Roosevelt's close friends and important associates believe that he could be renominated and reelected without great difficulty, but few, if any, of them want him to take the risks involved. Among the men and women who have been, under Mr. Roosevelt's direction, the real architects of the New Deal, there is a widespread desire to separate the progressive political movement from the issue of personal leadership or personal rule—an issue which would be aggravated if Mr. Roosevelt were nominated for a third term.

Apart from the agitation of opponents who are trying to "smoke out" Mr. Roosevelt, the wave of third-term talk is impelled chiefly by two growing doubts: Whether a suitable successor to Mr. Roosevelt can be found and, if he can be found, whether he can be nominated in the Democratic national convention.

• • • •

THERE IS nothing new about Mr. Roosevelt's concept of the role of the Democratic Party:

"In tracing Roosevelt's political activities . . . it becomes perfectly clear that he followed consistently a course toward a very definite objective—the creation of a Progressive Democratic Party, national in scope, with the active, integrated party machinery indispensable to success under the American political system."

That was written by the author of this column in 1931—almost a year before Mr. Roosevelt's first nomination for the Presidency. It referred to Mr. Roosevelt's political activities from 1920 to 1928, before he had much reason to expect ever to be President, much less President in a critical period of national and world affairs.

Mr. Roosevelt, has a vital interest in seeing that the essentials of his program are safeguarded, perfected, and developed in the future—preferably by a Progressive Democratic Party. No "logical" successor to him as yet emerged. The selection of a President is always a big gamble. But there are available at least six or eight men of his general social philosophy who measure up to normal Presidential standards. The difficulty is in getting any of them nominated.

• • • •

IT IS extraordinary that a man who commands the support of a generous majority of the electorate is not the undisputed leader of his own party. The party structure is still largely in the hands of the old-line Democrats who were its caretakers in its post-war decade of decay. In that period the real opposition to the Republican Party and the constructive leadership in Congress came almost chiefly from a handful of progressives. The old-line Democrats were incapable of effecting the coalition with which Mr. Roosevelt has governed and they are incapable of maintaining it. Some of them have been Mr. Roosevelt's most troublesome opponents. But now that the party has been rehabilitated and converted into an extremely valuable property, they obviously are intent upon taking full possession of it.

The old-line Democrats are entrenched in State and local patronage and their position is further fortified by the Federal patronage which was too indiscriminately showered on them. In the Iowa senatorial primary, Harry Hopkins discovered that the political control of WPA rested, not with himself, but with the State Democratic leaders. The old-line Democrats apparently believe that with the help of the strong party organizations and possibly a trend "to the right" in public opinion, they can cash in on Mr. Roosevelt's achievements.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT ought to be skillful enough to break the back of the opposition within his own party and bring about the nomination of a man who can be trusted to carry forward his policies. But owing to his great personal prestige and the lip homage paid to it by so many of the old-line Democrats, it may be easier for him to obtain renomination for himself. And in the minds of millions of his supporters the latter course may seem the safer.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Hollywood Separations.

Movie picture fans would get the greatest of all possible surprises if a movie star came out one of these days and left her husband without first getting the co-operation of press, radio and newsreels.

• • • •

It would cause a sensation in this country if a Hollywood couple decided to call their marriage off without arranging for a coast-to-coast network.

• • • •

There was a time when Hollywood realized that movie interest was built and sustained on love interest; that true love was the very basis of the cinema drama, and that the screen world should never be allowed to do anything to destroy the "they lived happily ever after" illusion.

• • • •

But if the screen stars of today don't publicize their family quarrels, broadcast their domestic upsets and put across their separation agreements in a big way, it's regarded as Error No. 1.

• • • •

And those statements they issue! The delicatessen dealers have a name for 'em.

• • • •

You know the stuff . . . "We both are terribly sorry that our marriage has not been a success" . . . "We are parting the very best of friends" . . . "We admire and respect each other very deeply" . . . etc.

• • • •

The marriage is a bust purely because they hold each other in such high esteem!

• • • •

One of these days a Hollywood actress is going to sue her husband for a divorce, put the cover over the baloney and issue the following honest statement to her public:

"Yes, it is true that I am divorcing Manuel. I hate the egg. Our marriage was a terrific mistake from the first, and it just goes to show the danger of drinking out of a tub at any house party.

"We have fought like cats and dogs (no, cut out the cats and make it just dogs) ever since we were married, and how we have managed to live together this long—it's almost a year now—is beyond me. It's probably because I don't go home much.

"I'm getting this divorce because I want a divorce. We have nothing in common. I think he is a bum husband and a bum actor. If I never see him again it will be swell.

"P. S.: He hates me, too."

Back-Yard Idyl.

With octagons and pentagons
Embossed against the sky,
Geometry in verdure
Above me where I lie,

Where am I? In a jungle?
A tropical retreat?
No—dozing in a back yard
Behind a city street.

Oh, gracious tree of heaven,
To you my fervent psalm;
What need have I of forest
Beneath my back-yard palm?

—Mary H. Paine.

E. B. tells of the young man who, explaining the New York law requiring medical tests before marriage, said: "It's just to prove we are fit to be tied, dear."

Three prominent society women married suddenly in Reno last week. It must be the Corrigan influence . . . heading for one goal and getting another.

In Demand.

I'm a popular guy from night till morn,
Though as hard to find as a midge—
It appears the reason that I was born
Was to make a fourth at bridge!

5 D. C. Youths Get Camp Promotion

Five Washington youths have been promoted to the non-commissioned ranks of the Citizens Military Training Corps at Camp Thayer, Fort Hoyle, Md., it was announced yesterday. Among those honored at a ceremony Wednesday for leadership and efficiency were Anthony V. Albamonte and Allen R. DeLong, promoted to the rank of sergeants, and Robert P. Halpin, Michael J. Quirk and Gordon F. Sandefur, to the rank of corporal.

Lieut. Col. J. J. Daub, regimental commander, presented warrants to 55 sergeants and 83 corporals. Promotion gave the trainees new chevrons for their sleeves and classed them as possible candidates for commissions as second lieutenants in the Officers Reserve Corps at the completion of their fourth year.

Books And Things

By Edward Angly

On Oscar Wilde.

MOST of what has been written about Oscar Wilde has been distorted either out of loathing or adulation. Boris Brasol, while adding little that is new to the story of the Victorian esthete, has succeeded in writing an "understanding" biography of Oscar. His book, "Oscar Wilde: The Man—the Artist—the Martyr" (Scribner's, $3.50), fulfills its triple promise.

Happily it does not carry out the implied threat in the introduction, wherein Mr. Brasol plunges straight into the subject of homosexuality, argues that it is only in recent years that men have begun to regard such sins and weaknesses as Wilde's as pathological rather than criminal subjects for prosecution. He remarks that we have only now "reached that stage of cultural development and intellectual freedom where we no longer need to invoke the authority of the vicar in order to render our verdict on a question of esthetics or the merits of a philosophical system." Then he trots out the not unfamiliar legends attributing morbid perversion to a long string of history's great—Alexander, Caesar, Hamilcar, Hannibal and a score of others. Once he plunges into his biography, however, Mr. Brasol accords the ruin of Wilde and the things that brought it about no more than their deserved space in the whole pattern of his career.

BORN IN Russia in 1885, a time at which Oscar had been one year a bridegroom, Mr. Brasol practiced law during the Czarist regime, came to America after the Bolshevik revolution and has since carried on his profession in this country. He apparently has gone thoroughly to all the sources. His book is well documented. In addition to an impressive bibliography, index and notes, there is, in the addenda, a captivating chronological index, through which the reader may follow, day by day through the years, the principal comings and goings, writings doings and undoings, of Wilde. After all, there might come reminiscent evenings in the company of elders when it would be interesting to establish just what night it was grandma heard Oscar lecture at Peekskill. It was July 29, 1882.

As a sympathetic biographer, Mr. Brasol feels that such professed friends as Frank Harris and Robert Ross wronged Wilde in their writings about him. He dismisses Gide's study as a pack of vile lies. He pours his contempt upon the hypocrisies of Victorian English society. He does not, however, either gloss over or minimize Wilde's errors of act and judgment. Sensibly he weighs in their place the pretenses and posings of the poet, his minor cruelties of tongue and pen, and the sheer idiocy of some of his posturings.

• • • •

Impotence Of Executive Scored By Wilson Is Reversed Today

By Merlo J. Pusey

NO one complains these days that the Government of the United States is lacking in leadership. In fact, the burning issue of the year is whether "yes" men or independent Legislators shall be elected to Congress in November. All political questions revolve about support for the New Deal or opposition to it. In the person of Franklin D. Roosevelt the country has leadership plus.

In view of that fact it is interesting to note the concern of a distinguished political scientist about 40 years ago over the absence of any provision for positive leadership in the American scheme of government. That keen student of government was Woodrow Wilson, then professor of jurisprudence in Princeton University. His thought-provoking address entitled "Leaderless Government" was delivered before the Virginia State Bar Association in 1897.

Fortunately, this address, along with 25 others to which lawyers of the Old Dominion have listened over a long period of years, has been revived in book form. The volume, said to be the first symposium of this type ever published, recently appeared under the title of "Notable Virginia Bar Addresses."

• • • •

PROF. WILSON made it clear that he was not casting aspersions upon President McKinley. He raised the question of leaderless government as a problem in political science that shoul' engage the attention of the American people. And in concluding the address, he recommended changes designed to accomplish much of what President Roosevelt has now actually done in dealing with Congress.

Before noting those proposals, however, a glance at the background of Wilson's criticism may be interesting. For example, the following paragraph:

Look at the familiar system for a little with this matter in view, and you will see that, as we now use it, it seems devised as if to prevent official and responsible leadership. The President cannot lead. We call his office great, say that the Queen of England has no power to be compared with his, and make choice of nominees for the Presidency as if our votes decide a constructive policy for the four years to come; but we know that in fact he has as little power to originate as the the Queen has . . . he has no means of attack and few effective weapons of defense.

THAT SITUATION Prof. Wilson considered the more deplorable because of the leadership which had been exercised by Presidents in the early days of the Republic. "It was taken for granted at the first," he said, "that the real leaders of the Nation would be put into the Presidential chair." But, roughly speaking, he found that our Presidents had been real leaders until Andrew Jackson went home to the Hermitage. In the years that followed there were a few leaders (perhaps he was thinking especially of Lincoln) but for the most part the country had blundered along without any very positive direction.

Turning to Congress for some signs of effective leadership, Wilson was equally disappointed. "The Senate," he said, "is deliberate enough; but it is hardly deliberative after its ancient and better manner; and who shall say who is responsible for what it does and for what it does not do? The House of Representatives is neither deliberate nor deliberative."

"And so we have," the speaker continued, "the composite thing which we call the Government of the United States. Its several parts are severally chosen; it is no unified and corporate whole . . . It is a Government without definite order, showing a confused interplay of forces, in which no man stands at the helm to steer, whose course is beaten out by the shifting winds of personal influence and popular opinion."

Such a government, Wilson concluded, was not properly serving the needs of the United States. "Our fathers were choosing men," he said, "and so must we be. They chose governments to suit their circumstances, not to suit their ancestors, and we must follow the like good rule—praying that we may choose wisely as they did." He had every respect for the Constitution. But his advice was to look facts in the face, and "if need be, fit our institutions to suit them."

• • • •

IN ONE paragraph there is a definite hint that Wilson had visualized himself in the White House even at that early date. He was complaining of the lack of any opportunity to vote for a specific national policy. "As it is," he said, "I vote for nobody I can depend upon to do anything—no, not if I were to vote for myself." When Mr. Wilson did reach the White House, however, there was no lack of aggressive leadership. The tragic aspect of his 1897 diagnosis is that the greatest efforts of his career were frustrated, years later, by the very division of responsibility which he criticized as a professor.

IN BRIEF, Prof. Wilson wanted to make the President and his Cabinet responsible for the initiation of legislation of a national character. He would have permitted department heads to sit in Congress to "propose, defend and explain" administration policy. "We should have Presidents and Cabinets of a very different caliber," he contended, "were we to make it their bounden duty to act as a committee for the whole Nation to choose and formulate matters for the consideration of Congress in the name of a party and an Administration . . ."

He did not suggest specific methods, but only an idea—"a way out of chaos." His objective was "the nationalization of the motive power of the government, to offset the economic sectionalization of the country." "I suggest," he said, "the addition to Congress, which represents us severally, of a power, constituted how you will, which shall represent us collectively in the proposing of laws; which shall have the right as of course to press national motives and courses of action to a vote in the Congress."

It may be fairly said that the Roosevelt Administration has achieved this objective with no vital change in the structure of the Federal Government. Much of the legislation passed in recent years has come directly from the White House or other agencies controlled by the President. No Cabinet member has had a seat in Congress, but various personal aides to the President, hidden away in the Department of the Interior, the RFC and other agencies, have carried his messages to Congress and shaped a good deal of the legislation enacted during the last six years.

If the reorganization bill had been enacted, the President would have had six executive assistants to whom the work of preparing legislation and shaping national policy could have been definitely assigned. That might have given permanent form to one segment of the plan advanced by Woodrow Wilson more than 40 years ago.

• • • •

BUT THE most interesting fact which stands out from a reading of Wilson's bar address today is that President Roosevelt has achieved the national leadership which this expert in political science wished to confer upon the office of Chief Executive. After all, our political system appears to be sufficiently flexible to meet the varied requirements of a rapidly changing country. When a severe depression seemed to call for unified recovery efforts, Congress readily accepted the hegemony of a man whom the people had chosen to lead the way.

The question asked during the last two years is not whether the President can lead, but whether there has been too much domination at the White House. Reaction against executive influence over Congress has been strong during the last two years. Since the crisis has passed, it is only natural that Congress should resume a more positive place in our political system. While this inevitably means that the influence of the Executive on legislation will be less potent, it is no bar to co-operation between Congress and the President.

When the executive and legislative branches are at loggerheads, the Government may work at cross-purposes for a period. But that situation can usually be changed when there is any vital issue on which the will of the people is clearly manifested. In view of recent experience, few would now advocate still greater powers for the President in proposing legislation and forcing it to an issue in Congress.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

A Widely Read Novel Is Made Into Gallant and Amusing Film

'Mother Carey's Chickens,' RKO-Keith's, Is Enacted by Splendid Adult and Juvenile Cast; Summer Theaters Thrive; Theater Notes.

THOSE homely and wholesome virtues that appeal equally and unfailingly to all ages and classes are inherent in "Mother Carey's Chickens," the film version of the novel of the same name, by Kate Douglas Wiggin, and the stage play adapted from it by the author and Rachel Crothers, presented yesterday for the first time in Washington on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

BELL.

In transcribing the story of Mother Carey and her brood of four children—two charming daughters and two younger sons—to the silver sheet, S. K. Lauren and Gertrude Purcell, responsible for the present RKO-Radio version, have emphasized the element of comedy and subordinated pathos. They have fabricated a simple and unembellished tale of triumph over homelessness and penury that does not reflect the somber side of Mother Carey's life quite so vividly as it does the amusing deflection of its tragic problems by the diverting adventures of her resourceful children. "Mother Carey's Chickens," therefore, is a more enlivening and entertaining picture than might be expected from any sketchy recital of its basic content.

Mrs. Carey's difficulties, in the film, are more implied than real. Her principal fears are of the things that never happen. To be sure, her husband dies and leaves her destitute; a wealthy aunt attempts a bogus sort of charity by seeking unsuccessfully to separate her from her children; she surreptitiously accepts an arduous job in a factory and collapses under the strain, but these are comparatively minor episodes introduced only to sharpen the humor and points the contrast of a greater number of scenes depicting the modest victories of a lovable and gallant family.

Such distressing incidents as occur in their lives are shared by the whole household. The more hilarious intervals of the action are intrusted almost entirely to the youngsters in the cast; the romantic interludes to the two ingenuous daughters who love the same handsome young man, but manage to overcome that disturbing impasse to their own and everybody else's satisfaction.

The character of Mrs. Carey is played with further evidence of her skill by Fay Bainter, who is not so dominant a figure here as she was, for example, in "White Banners." She is sufficiently dominant, however, to prove herself the kind of understanding and sympathetic mother any family of adoring children would love to have. Her two daughters are played naturally and with charm by Anne Shirley and Ruby Keeler. Miss Keeler, heretofore identified with dancing roles and musical screen plays, finds the natural gentleness of her nature a vital asset in her assumption of the role of Kitty Carey, not quite so important a part as Miss Shirley's, as Nancy, but one that complements it perfectly.

Jackie Moran, remembered with Deanna Durbin in "Mad About Music," is the "man of the family," after the death of his father in the Spanish-American War, and discovers many of life's lesser plagues in the ubiquitous admiration of Virginia Weidler, who "recites" and runs her heels over so violently that on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays she is compelled to wear her shoes buttoned on the inside to keep them even. Miss Weidler is the most able comedienn in the cast. The most competent comedian is Master Donnie Dunagan, aged 3, who becomes a paperhanger in one sequence with disastrous results.

Among the supporting players are such reliable veterans as Walter Brennan, Alma Kruger, Margaret Hamilton, Ralph Morgan, as the short-lived father; Phyllis Kennedy, Harvey Clark and George Irving. James Ellison and Frank Albertson are the helpful young men who do most to smooth the path of the Careys by devising an intensely laughable plan for scaring the predatory Fullers off the property they are attempting to buy out from under the widowed mother and her "chickens."

"Mother Carey's Chickens" obviously has been painstakingly produced by RKO-Radio and directed by Rowland V. Lee with many helpful atmospheric touches. It is not a "big" picture, in the usual sense, but it is one that may be unhesitatingly recommended to every member of every family for an hour or so of splendid entertainment.

* * * *

The short subjects at Keith's this week are in keeping with the excellence of the feature they supplement. The Sportscope, "Flying Feathers," is perhaps a little too much badminton for the American appetite, but the "Stranger Than Fiction" reel is interesting and the Pathe News diversified and timely. Walt Disney's Silly Symphony, "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," suggested by the Eugene Field poem, presents an astonishing dream adventure of three cherubic youngsters flying around through the clouds in a wooden shoe—in Technicolor, of course. Here, again, the entire family will find something to enjoy.

* * * *

The record of the current week seems to indicate that Washington's pastoral areas are not overseated with "straw hat" theaters.

The new Olney Theater has been enjoying capacity patronage since its inaugural performance of "The Lady Has a Heart," starring Elissa Landi, last Monday night. As this is written, returns from yesterday's first matinee performance are not in, but the report is prevalent that if you are looking for Impresario Steve Cochran, you will find him somewhere up there walking on air.

The same is practically true of the Roadside group. The first week of "The Miner's Daughter" has been a sellout, with standees at every performance. Perhaps it is just as well that that special bus will not run next Monday night. Maybe you couldn't get in, even if the Young Republicans Club of Montgomery County, Md., hadn't bought out the house.

And just to prove that they are in the running, the Cross Roads Players, over in Virginia, announce a second week of Noel Coward's "Private Lives," to begin next Monday night, with a continuation of the nightly bus service from Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. They also make known that on August 8 Owen Davis' "The Ninth Guest" will be the bill and that "The Old Soak," interrupted by the accident to Arch McDonald's ankle, after one performance, will be repeated the last week in August as the closing attraction of the Cross Roads season—with Mr. McDonald in the title role.

* * * *

A little morbid and grewsome, perhaps, but the fact nevertheless remains that both the Fox Movietone News and the companion reel, "News of the Day," caught sensational, "on-the-spot" photographs of that hideous suicide plunge in New York Tuesday night. For those who wish to see them, they will be on view at Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters, beginning this morning. The prints were shipped from New York yesterday.

* * * *

If you must have a peek at the incoming attractions to keep from losing your temper these hot days, the Earle will present Harold Lloyd in "Professor, Beware," the week of August 5; the Capitol will offer Don Ameche and Arleen Whelan in "Gateway," a story of Ellis Island; the Palace, Walter Wanger's "Algiers," with Charles Boyer and Hedy Lamarr—the former Hedy Kriesler, of "Ecstacy;" RKO-Keith's, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen in "Letter o Introduction," with Adolphe Menjou and Andrea Leeds, and the Metropolitan, Clarke Gable and Claudette Colbert in a revival of "It Happened One Night."

* * * *

Everything-Considered Note.

Speaking of hot days, personally, I wouldn't be sure I don't prefer that rainy weather!

Burgundian Battle Fought for Movies

Most strenuous movie fight of the year, a re-enactment of the Burgundian siege of Paris during the Middle Ages, was filmed without a single player sustaining more than superficial injury.

The scene, utilizing more than 500 extras clad in armor and coats of mail and wielding a battering ram, swords, cross-bows and daggers, was filmed by Producer-Director Frank Lloyd for "If I Were King," which stars Ronald Colman.

A doctor and registered nurse, standing by, treated approximately 25 extras on the set for minor cuts and abrasions.

Most frequent hurts, it developed, were skinned noses, caused by helmets slipping down over faces when the armor was banged by broadswords.

Hollywood, Calif., July 28.—Germany has its Hitler, Italy its Mussolini, Russia its Stalin. But America is free. Oh yes, that's what you think! Here we have the greatest dictatorship in the world—the Public.

HEDDA HOPPER

Picture producers no longer can tell them what they want to see. The public tells the producers. And they told Universal in no uncertain way, by letters and telegrams that they wanted Deanna Durbin to remain a child instead of going into grown-up love scenes, which is easier said than done. Every mother knows that jump from adolescence into young womanhood is so sudden, it stuns all beholders.

All this was brought to mind by watching Deanna play some scenes with Melvyn Douglas for "That Certain Age." A pat on the arm had to be changed to a gentle shove. A line of affection was so underplayed that you couldn't recognize it. Director Ludwig's smile or frown is taken by Deanna at its face value. How else can you explain to a girl of 15 that she's giving—too much. A frown makes her unhappy, which tones down the scene. The line between is as fine as a hair. Believe me, it takes a knowledge of child psychology to direct her.

Then there's Jackie Cooper. He must be prevented from getting an inferiority complex. "We were all kids together at Metro," Jackie said, "but in this business you never know who's going up or down, and in the flash of an eye you're a success or a failure. Deanna was the quiet type. She couldn't go out like the rest of us kids. Now she's all lady and sitting on top, and I'm a little afraid of her."

He needn't be, for he has come through his adolescence without a hitch.

I hope Warners succeed in bringing Earl Froud to California for "Dark Victory." He'll have more jobs than he'll ever be able to handle. To know thyself is still the most difficult and entertaining problem we have to solve.

If you see young people going through the streets balancing books on their heads, you'll know they're pupils of Max Reinhardt's school, learning poise and balance while walking. Try it some time, it's good. And will help lift your eyes to the hills.

Red Golden, assistant director on "The Great Waltz," is vacationing at Catalina, trying to relearn the English language.

Clark Gable in "Too Hot to Handle" is now sharing scenes with a hungry crocodile whose trainer stands by saying, "Come on, baby honey, and remember not to bite—he's the star."

What with crocodiles, fleas, monkeys, dogs, horses, donkeys, elephants, camels, animated cartoons and Charlie McCarthy, we should form a league for the prevention of cruelty to stars—allowing animals to steal the spotlight. If this keeps up, we won't need humans.

Rosa Ponselle is begging those who accidentally took the cards with her flowers from the Hollywood Bowl, to please return cards so she can thank the senders, otherwise friends will think she's rude for not acknowledging them.

Live Circulation Helps to Avoid Facial Wrinkles

Expert Suggests Method to Keep Blood Flowing Freely.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THERE IS a great deal of truth in the old adage that you never will get wrinkles as long as you can blush. Blushing is proof of a good circulation, and that is the thing that keeps away wrinkles.

With good circulation the blood flows freely through all the veins and arteries. The tissues are nourished and the wastes carried away, and you present the fresh appearance associated with youth. Perking up the circulation, then, is an essential step toward beauty.

There are a dozen and one ways of doing this, including standing on your head or turning cartwheels! If these seem a bit upsetting, you can resort to milder measures, such as massage, a brisk rubdown, brushing your hair, taking it easy with your heels higher than your head, or stretching.

Massage Stimulating.

Massage stimulates the circulation in spots and is a reducing aid to the extent that it tends to make the fatty tissues in these parts more readily available for energy. If you have unsightly hollows, the increase in circulation would help to fill in these part. Whether you are reducing or gaining, massage can be a valuable part of your program, but in either case it is secondary to exercise and should be used in conjunction with specific exercises to normalize measurements which require correction.

Friction drives the blood into the tiny cells beneath the skin and is another excellent means of stimulating the circulation. To put yourself in a glow, have a rubdown with friction mitts, rub your skin with handfuls of coarse salt, or use a long-handled bath brush. Alternate hot and cold showers—if you can take them—will give your circulation a decided jolt and are a refreshing finish to your bath.

When you brush your hair bend over from the waist and brush vigorously to send the blood into the scalp and face. Some of the de luxe beauty parlors have you lie down with the feet slightly elevated for your facial, and you can make use of this same trick when you take your afternoon nap. Rest your feet, instead of your head, on the pillows.

New Styles Suggested For Golfing Clothes

Paris (U.P.).—So you're going to give up golf! Think twice of the decision and look at some of the new golfing clothes. And you'll probably change your mind.

Take, for instance, the golf costume Robert Piguet suggests. (His mannequin even carries a golf club in her hand while she models it.) The skirt is a short-flared model of gray wool. The blouse is of bright blue jersey—long-sleeved and very blousy.

For all-summer linksters in hot climates there is a one-piece dress of natural colored linen, whose two pockets—one breast pocket and one hip pocket—are in the form of big red apples appiqued in the same weight linen.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Bachelor Is Told That Girls Can't Be Expected to Fawn on Man Who Calls Them Only Once a Month.

READERS HAVE LITTLE SYMPATHY and much sardonic comment to offer that "Annoyed Bachelor" whose letter telling of his "illuminating experiences with women of Washington," was published here July 26. He expressed dissatisfaction with the "type of girl who always wants to know, in advance, of accepting an invitation, what 'entertainment is planned,'" and imputed mercenary motives to those young ladies who "are in the habit of breaking dates when they see a chance for doing a little better." Readers, however, seem to be of the opinion that whatever short treatment this particular young man meets at the hands of girls is self-invited. The following letters reflect the general reaction. M. H.

* * * *

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the letter from "Annoyed Bachelor," I must blow off a bit of steam, which I feel qualified to do after having had six years' dating experience in Washington, during which time I've run into several (but not many, thank goodness!) of his type—egotistical, complacently aggressive, money-minded prigs. Not even as a last resort against loneliness would I be bored to death listening to his type spend an entire evening bragging of his advancing career; his big raises in salary; his important contributions to big business deals; his busy club life, where he is using all the other members to his own advantage, where a committee could not function without him and where all the fellows think he has the most marvelous personality.

* * * *

Any girl who didn't see him oftener than once a month could hardly be more than a casual acquaintance, and could not be expected to "oh" and "ah" over his achievements, or to spend the evening seeing that he "gets attention." Never have I felt that a young man was doing me a favor by taking me out and letting me enjoy his company for an evening. So I never thought it necessary (to quote "A. B.'s words) "during the evening to make (the man) feel by (my) actions that I was genuinely appreciative of (his) favors." Yes, he really said that!

* * * *

As for inquiring what is planned for the evening, I always consider it proper, if the young man doesn't volunteer, because it would be rather awkward to appear dressed for the evening in a chiffon dress and large hat, only to find that the young man had planned a ride in a motor boat. Since "A. B." isn't asking for advice, and means to "keep his career foremost," this letter is just an outburst of indignation at his kind. (I am speaking from past experience, as I have been married for six months.) Yours truly, C. P.

* * * *

An Alger Book Sap.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Annoyed Bachelor" should be given a corner near the fireplace in every girl's heart. This young (old) man unwinds 10 compacts of autobiography and useful moral to young ladies who are so thoughtless as to break dates—not because he seeks seeks advice but because he has the purely altruistic desire (or so he says) to keep Washington girls from heading into social oblivion.

* * * *

The first three fat autobiographical paragraphs of his letter give a painfully clear insight into the writer's peculiar introversion. He is a horrible example of the adolescent (self-styled) intellectuals who are being wrought in some of our lesser colleges. Several masculine commentators in our office pronounced him a "wrong guy," but were far too masculine to take his remarks so seriously as to challenge them in print.

* * * *

But not so the ladies! We all vowed to pitch in and give this career boy a little verbal arsenic. The consensus of opinion was that "Annoyed Bachelor" isn't stood up at the last minute by his "dates" merely because he isn't matrimonially-minded. To quote a pithy extract from his letters "—I feel safe ine saying that these broken dates are not based on objections to me as a person—." There is some question as to how safe he should feel on that point. The type of person who would write such a letter is either a man with a very subtle sense of humor, or else an ass. . . .

* * * *

Judging from his letter, "Annoyed Bachelor" is a 25-year-old little sap, who takes himself more seriously than a psycopathic Napoleon. He operates in his own little world, where he is a career boy, like a Horatio Alger book character. He is probably as shallow as water in a sieve and as narrow as a tenement house hallway. The one good thing about him is that he has not, as yet, concentrated on one lone girl. Because if he had, the poor innocent might have made the mistake of marrying the dotterel. Regards from, M. E. C.

Reminiscent of 'Feather Top'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Annoyed Bachelor" must have completed his college course with nary a course in psychological behaviorism to his credit. Else he would hesitate to scrape off the veneer and give the initiated a clear view of his inner workings. He reminds me a little of the "Story of Feather Top, or A Moralized Legend," by Hawthorne, in which a mischievous old witch in an experimental moment made a scarecrow come to life by applying to his grotesque pumpkin face her own magic pipe and admonishing him to smoke for dear life.

* * * *

Huffing and puffing, he assumed the proportions of flesh and blood and his tattered garments took on the appearance of a man-about-town insomuch that he was emboldened to pose as a beau in the village, where the girls fell for him with a bang until his pipe went out and he was a pitiable masculine Cinderella with never a shoe to his broomstick foot. A just rebuke to his braggadocio-ing.

* * * *

"Annoyed Bachelor's" display of "quality assets" and his tendency to associate with "the right people" all tell their own story. A little of what is known as "re-education" might work wonders for this young man. He is acting Pygmalion to his own Galatea and it serves him right if the Washington Aphrodites give him the ha-ha. Paris Believes Prints Refreshing for Nights

Paris (U.P.).—Did someone say that prints were giving up their ground? They may be slipping when it comes to day-time wear, but Paris still thinks that colored prints are the most refreshing for summer nights.

One of Heim's printed crepes features a high collar, buttoning in back, but the dress itself is backless. While flat crepe is the favored material for floral evening prints, you will see a number of flowered linens and cottons for less formal wear. Lanvin chooses chiffon for her floral print evening dress. Worn with it is a floor-length circular cape of matching chiffon. The vogue of printed net, however, seems to have passed for the moment.

Leaders of 4-H Clubs Recognize Good Grooming

Recognizing the importance of good grooming in building for the future, leaders of 4H Clubs in many rural communities have included in their programs a "good looks study plan" of which personal cleanliness is a major division.

Each year thousands of progressive young girls assemble in various club headquarters to attend these classes, which include practical demonstrations on the proper care of the skin, hair and hands.

The Draped Influence in Dress and Shoes

THE BIG IDEA from now on will be to look soft. Not mentally or morally, but sartorially. And one way that is being achieved is by drapery. Everything is draped, from hats to shoes. Bags, belts and gloves feature folds and shirrings. Turbans, berets and toques are whirled and twirled, gathered and twisted. Dresses feature the diagonal drapery, as illustrated in the mottled gray silk jersey dress at left, and shoes, both in leather and suede, are draped at the toes, as illustrated in the early fall kidskin sandal shown above. These draped sandals are ideal for wear with the first fall dresses, as they have a light, graceful appearance. Moreover, open toes will be worn right into fall, say style experts. Note the turban bow on the draped vamp and the bracelet strap draped around the instep. In the afternoon silk jersy dress, designed by Robert Piguet, the drapery sweeps from the right shoulder to the left hip and the sleeves are draped at the wrist.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Night Work.

MISS JENKS—Girls, Mr. Flint says we'll all have to stay tonight and get out these letters.

MISS MIFFIN—Well, I'm not going to stay this time. I'm always the goat.

MISS SPEEL—I can't stay. I've got a date.

MRS. NIBBS—I have to go home to my husband. Anyway, I don't think the women ought to stay that have husbands——

MISS TROTTER—You don't? Well, what are the single girls going to do about their boy friends?

MISS FLYTIE—Let the old maids—I mean, let the girls stay that haven't got any dates.

MISS CHEESIT—Well, I'm under a doctor's care. My doctor'd have a fit. He says I'm already working too hard——

MISS MIFFIN—I'd like to see anybody that's working any harder than I am.

MRS. MINCH—Well, I simply can't stay. I've got a baby.

MISS CHITT—Who hasn't got a baby—of some kind or another?

MISS JENKS—Well, somebody's got to stay. Mr. Flint said——

MISS MIFFIN—Let him stay then. The men never stay.

MISS JENKS—Well, if you girls could stay a little while—and then go on your dates——

MISS BUBBLE—Well, but I promised to be at a cocktail party first.

MISS SPEEL—I've got to play tennis.

MRS. NIBBS—My husband says he just won't stand for any more night work——

MISS CHEEIT—My doctor says the same thing.

MISS TROTTER—The boy I go with says it's not safe for girls to go home so late.

MISS FLYTIE—Yes, you know the other night a man followed me——

MISS BUBBLE—One tried to stop me on the street——

MRS. MINCH—One stopped me in broad daylight——

MISS SPEEL—That's nothing to what happened to me——

MISS JENKS—Well girls we've got to settle this. Shall I tell Mr. Flint you won't stay?

MISS HACK—Well—I always stay—but I guess——

MISS MIFFIN—You haven't stayed as much as I have!

MISS SPEEL—I wouldn't mind staying so much if I thought they appreciated it——

MRS. NIBBS—That's just the trouble. They don't think any more of you.

MISS TROTTER—Yes, where does it get you?

MRS. MINCH—The whole trouble here is there's no future——

MISS JENKS—All right then, Miss Hack says she'll stay. Anyone else?

MISS MIFFIN—Well, I suppose I might as well be the goat again.

MRS. NIBBS—I suppose I COULD call up my husband——

MISS FLYTIE—I'll stay if all the others do.

MRS. MINCH—I guess I can call the maid about the baby, but I still think the single girls——

MISS BUBBLE—Oh well I'll call off my cocktail party.

MISS CHEESIT—I'll stay but I know my doctor'll never forgive me.

MISS SPEEL—Well, I suppose if I have to—I'll stay.

* * * *

MISS JENKS—All right then now if we'll all work hard and not talk maybe we can finish up early.

MRS NIBBS—It's not that I mind the work so much—it's the principle of the thing.

MISS FLYTIE—That's it exactly! They don't appreciate it.

MISS BUBBLE—Say, do you know what a girl in another department told me?

MISS SPEEL—No, but listen here . . .

Jewelry Cleaner.

To clean jewelry put it in a small bowl, cover it with glycerine and let it stand 15 minutes. Pour off the gyycerine and cover the jewelry with one cup of warm water and two tablespoons of ammonia. After five minutes rinse the jewelry with cold water and wipe it dry with soft tissue paper. Never use a frayed cloth or cotton for drying jewelry.

Black Velvet Ribbons.

Paris (U.P.).—It is hard to count the number of fluffy white organza or chiffon evening gowns which have their bouffant skirts topped by a black velvet ribbon sash. When it comes to satin ribbons, Mainbocher regards them as essentials for his wide variety of spring evening creations. So does Lelong, who perches a "candy box" bow of bright pink satin on each shoulder of a black net dinner dress.

Leather Complements Paquin's Delicate Tulle

Paris (U.P.).—Tough leather hobnobs with delicate tulle in one of Paquin's creations—this time in a floor length dinner dress of black and white diagonally striped tulle. Fat brass buttons run from the top of the high neck to the bottom of the hem. A wide belt of emerald green suede marks the waist.

Jean Desses combines red, blue and yellow leather to make the striped belt for a one-piece double-breasted white lien dress. Thongs, in a mixture of the promary colors, make tassels at each end of the belt.

GardenNook Is Pleasant Dinner Spot

Back Yards and Porches Can Be Transformed for Cool Meals.

Colorful and Inexpensive Furniture and Dishes Enhance Charm.

The Post Food Editor.

NOW THAT Washington skies have taken a turn for the better, attention shifts to outdoor dining. Since the majority of local homemakers do not even live near a garden or terraced lawn, their problem is not so simple as that of their country friends. However, there are still ways by which they may get fresh air and sunshine or evening stars with their food. Here is what some Washington women are doing about indoor dining.

Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, 4939 Thirtieth place northwest, has established a screened porch for her family's meals. The location is directly adjacent to kitchen and dining room so that service is easily managed. This dining lounge is furnished colorfully but simply, washable red and white oil cloth, tablecloths, gay china and glassware being utilized. This former open space has evolved into the most popular and coolest section of the house with little expense and effort.

Mrs. Frederick G. Snyder, 419 Cummings lane, Chevy Chase, Md., has one of the most fetching outdoor dining retreats in Washington. She and Mr. Snyder have spent years developing the plot behind their house into a garden of unusual beauty. The Snyders, who have cooking equipment in both garden and basement, have developed local fame over their steak and hamburger roasts.

Garden Nook Developed.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, Broad Branch and Grant Roads overlooking Rock Creek Park, has developed a charming exterior dining nook on the brick-paved terrace of her seven-acre home. Mrs. Daniel is laying future plans for a complete outdoor barbecue and grill. Her many friends are looking forward to this aquisition, but until then are contentedly dining al fresco amidst masses of rhododendruns and ancient oaks.

Few homemakers of modest income can manage such outdoor places as these. But they can exercise taste and courage in transposing a corner of a back yard into a place of privacy and charm. Here are some suggestions garnered through experience.

If you are impatient for a garden eating spot started this summer, don't wait for impressive hedges and grapevines to grow. Start modestly with potato vines or Jacob's ladders. They grow rapidly and in time will give you complete shade and privacy. Inexpensive wicker, metal or wood furniture can be purchased at department stores. Weather resistant metal and glass-topped tables are decorative for dinners of ripe fruits, vegetables and summer drinks. Unused kitchen tables and chairs can be painted and covered with cotton crash cloth. Brilliant Scandinavian, Mexican or Bohemian pottery, linens, glassware and cutlery are reasonable and enticing.

Back Landing Utilized.

One apartment dweller, nostalgic for country verdure, was moaning over her lack of a back yard when she was reminded that her back landing or area-way was large enough to accommodate a small drop leaf table and two stools. She latticed her "porch" with ply board and ivy for a greenery touch and serves tea or supper to her friends. She is now filling window boxes with herbs for broth or salad.

Outdoor service should be informal. One hot dish or casserole is ample. Serving is facilitated through use of covered entrees. Salads, open sandwiches, jellied soups, fruit cocktails, jellied or molded foods are ideal. The use of large trays reduces steps.

Foods that retain heat, such as corn on the cob, escalloped meat, fish and macaroni, are labor savers. Little grills, charcoal braziers or chafing dishes placed near a table are amusing and of great assistance in menu planning. Branbergers in Spanish sauce brought to the table would create a hit. Here is their recipe.

Branburgers.

1 egg
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1¼ cups milk
1 cup all-bran
1 lb. ground round steak
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
10 slices bacon

Beat egg and add salt, pepper, milk and all-bran. Combine meat with onion and parsley. Add the soaked bran and mix well. Form into cakes about 2 inches in diameter and 1 inch thick. Wrap slice of bacon around each cake and fasten with skewer. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 30 minutes or broil for 20 minutes. Serve with Spanish sauce. Five servings.

Note: Half cup grated cheese may be sprinkled over top of Branburgers before the last ten minutes of cooking.

Spanish Sauce.

1½ cups sliced onion
3 tablespoons fat
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 cups canned tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 cup stuffed whole olives

Brown onions lightly in the fat. Add green pepper, tomatoes and seasonings. Simmer until mixture thickens, stir in olives and heat thoroughly. Yield: Three cups sauce.

Trio Enjoys Informal Al Fresco Lunch

CAPITOL DISHES

Almond Sauce on Haddock Served at Diplomatic Dinner.

A SPECIAL Friday menu was designed for the dinner to be given tonight at the Hay-Adams House in honor of Mme. La Saigne and Mlle. Suzy La Saigne, mother and sister of Senora de Ghiraldo of the Argentine Embassy, who are visiting from Brazil. Among those who are attending are the Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, Juaquin de Sousa Leao, and members of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and Mrs. N. Brueur. The menu follows:

Chilled mint fruit cup
Fillet of haddock a la meuniere
Armandine
Creamed spinach
French fried potatoes
Lettuce Romaine with French dressing
Orange sherbet
Petite fours
Demitasse and bonbons

The almond sauce for the fillet of haddock is a special creation of Herr Meissner of the Hay-Adams House. The recipe follows:

Saute the fish in butter and prepare the sauce as follows: Soak almonds in lukewarm water and peel, cut in julienne and brown golden in butter. Now make a beurre meuniere by browning butter and adding lemon juice, pour over the fish and add almonds the last minute before serving. This is a delightfully mild and pleasing method of "spiking" flavor of fillet of haddock.

Fresh Tomato Dish May Win a Prize In Post's Contest

In response to a suggestion from Mrs. Barbara Lipscomb, 20 H street northeast, The Post's Recipe Contest will be on fresh tomatoes. The food department will gladly consider new contest themes submitted by its readers. Your everyday observations on cooking and marketing may prompt you to mail in a timely contest subject.

Although the tomato is still commonly thought of as a vegetable, it is the pulpy fruit of the "nightshade" family. When first discovered it was considered poisonous, and due to its glossy red coloring was dubbed "the love apple." It is today one of America's most popular foods, and its cooking uses are manifold.

If you have a pet tested recipe on fresh tomatoes, carefully write out your entry, and mail it to Alice Clayton, Post Food Editor. If you mail it before August 6, you may win one of the five cash awards.

First prize is $3, second $2, and there are three awards of $1 each.

Colorful Club Plate Wins Post's Recipe Contest

Miss Wiesbacker's Variable Creation Is Best of Ingenious Assortment of Cold Drinks; Mrs. H. H. Murphy Wins $2 Award.

WASHINGTON homemakers evinced enthusiasm over last week's contest for cold plate recipes. With crisp salad greens and "trimmings" and an overflow of seasonable vegetables obtainable around town, it is not hard to appreciate the appetizing recipe combinations possible.

Entries include such amusing inspirations as asparagus wrapped in ham, pimiento cups holding salad, almond and cucumber dressing for cold chicken, cole slaw in jelly and calves tongue on fruit salad.

A variety of recipes for use of the popular native fresh crab meat were entered. One color-minded contestant suggested mint sprigs as adornment for her crab-meat mold.

Entries Perk Up Editor.

Two entries were most encouraging to The Post Food Department. One was from an Annapolis resident who submitted over a half dozen entries on the subject. Another was from a tiny Arlington food "fan" who regularly sends in recipes accompanied by the remark that she is a very good cook, though only 14. If these two contestants remain as loyal and persevering as today's winners—they may also be receiving cash awards soon.

Fifteen contestants have been cited for honorable mention for their attractive cold platter suggestions.

Colorful Platter.

Miss Evelyn Wiesbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest, receives the first prize of $3. Miss Wiesbacker's Club Plate adheres closely to the modern trend toward nourishing and cooling one-dish summer meals. She has clevesly arranged color sequence in her assortment of foods — realizing the impetus that color harmony gives to the sluggish "dog day" appetites. She has thoughtfully suggested alternate moderately priced ingredients for such items as lobster and crab meat.

E. WIESBACKER.

CLUB PLATE.

Canned shrimp — drain, clean, moisten with French dressing and chill in refrigerator.

Lobster—canned or fresh—prepare in same way. Salmon may be substituted.

Crab meat, canned or fresh—remove bits of shell; prepare in same way or use tuna fish.

Small tomatoes—skin, scoop out centers and fill with chopped cucumbers mixed with mayonnaise. Chill.

Liver loaf or other cold meat loaf with sliced hard-cooked egg and pickle garnish.

To serve, arrange each seafood in separate nests of crisp salad green; also tomato and meat loaf. Place individual serving of Thousand Island dressing with ¼ cup drained chili sauce and 1 tablespoon each of chopped olives and green and red peppers.

Nourishing Meal.

Mrs. H. H. Murphy, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, has been awarded a $2 prize. She recommends chicken loaf with vegetables. In place of fowl as the main ingredient of her mold, diced ham, veal or a favorite left-over meat may be used. The addition of spicy filled grapefruit shells to this chicken and vegetable platter is both practical and gay.

CHICKEN LOAF WITH VEGETABLES.

2 tablespoons gelatin
3½ cups hot water
4 tablespoons lemon juice
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

Add dissolved gelatin to water and stir in the other ingredients. To one half of this, when about to set, add:

2 cups cooked chicken
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped green peppers
2 tablespoons finely chopped onions
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced

Add dissolved geletin to water and stir in lemon juice, salt and paprika. To one-half on this when about set add other ingredients.

Mix and pour in the center of a ring mold. To the remaining half of the aspic, when it starts to set, add several vegetables of choice, as grated raw carrots, finely chopped cabbage, thinly sliced unpeeled radishes, cooked peas, well-drained cooked beets—cut in tiny shapes, etc. Pour this in the ring.

Chill thoroughly, unmold on a platter, surround with watercress. At each end of the platter place half a grapefruit, shell, pinked. Fill one with horseradish dressing or cream mayonnaise. Heap the other with olives, pickled peppers and spiney gherkins. Serve with hot clover leaf rolls and iced tea.

Nautical Creation.

Third prize of $1 has been awarded to Mrs. Eleanor M. Young, 6404 Delaware street, Chevy Chase, Md. Her Cucumber Caravel is an ideal solution of what to do with those old unwanted cucumber skins. A caravel actually means a small vessel of the type used by sixteenth century Spaniards. Mrs. Young's little cucumber boat is a miniature version, but one containing chilled delicacies rather than fighting men.

MRS. YOUNG.

Cucumber Caravel.

Cut cucumbers in half lengthwise and hollow out the centers. Place in ice water until ready to serve. Mix with a large can of tuna fish, one onion, one cup of cooked diced potatoes and three hard-boiled eggs, chopped rather fine. Then make a dressing of one-fourth cup of olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of paprika.

When the mixture, liberally covered with the dressing, is placed in the hollowed cucumbers and served at once, it makes a cool satisfying dish for the main course of a meal.

Pungent Suggestion.

After submitting contest recipes over a long period of time, Mrs. William F. Guffey, jr., 3010 Wisconsin avenue northwest, has been awarded a prize of $1.

Mrs. Guffey's entry for cooked ham loaf and vegetable salad is inexpensive for the amount of flavor and distinction obtained. The use of brown sugar to flavor the loaf gives just enough tone to the tartness of vinegar and mustard. Her green vegetable salad is an agreeable companion for any hot weather meal.

MRS. GUFFEY.

Ham Loaf.

1 lb. ham (off shank is cheaper) ground fine
1 lb. pork ground fine
4 slices bread soaked in milk
2 eggs

Mix the above ingredients together, mold into loaf; add ¾ cup weak vinegar and 2 teaspoons dry mustard to 1 cup brown sugar and pour this over ham loaf. Bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours.

GREEN VEGETABLE SALAD.

1½ cups cooked string beans
1½ cooked new peas
1½ cups cucumber, diced
1 teaspoon onion, finely chopped
1-3 cup mayonnaise

Method: Cut string beans lengthwise and then crosswise in ¾-inch pieces. Add cooked peas, cucumbers and onion and marinate in French dressing 30 minutes in refrigerator. Drain thoroughly. Add mayonnaise and blend. Serve on crisp lettuce with toasted Saratoga flakes with grated cheese. Serves six.

Time-Saving Recipe.

Miss Doris Abott, 175 V street northeast, is another faithful contestant who today receives a $1 award. Her recipe for Jellied Veal is a mildly spicy dish which is particularly pleasing to appetites which demand chilled, easily digested summer foods. A dish such as this is perfect for week-end meals when homemakers want to spend more time with their families and less in the kitchen.

MISS ABBOTT.

JELLIED VEAL.

1 knuckle of veal—about 2 lbs.
2 quarts cold water
1 onion, sliced
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup finely cut celery
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped pimento
½ teaspoon celeary seed
Dash of tabasco sauce

Have butcher crack bone, cover with 2 quarts of water. Add onion. Heat to boiling point, then simmer, partly covered, till meat is tender. Pour off, and measure liquid which should be about a quart. Remove meat from bone, discarding gristle. Grind or chop fine. Soften gelatin in the 2 tablespoons of cold water, add to hot stock, chill and when partly set, add meat and seasonings and stir until well mixed. Rinse individual molds or one large mold in ice water. Pour in mixture. Allow to stand until cold and jelliedovernight, if possible, in refrigerator.

Now for the cold plate. Unmold and serve on crisp lettuce leaves topped with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with thinly sliced cucumbers and tomatoes. Accompanied by cold blueberry muffins, potato chips and iced tea this makes a delicious hot weather lunch or supper.

Cold Plates Win Prizes

Combinations of fruits, seafood, vegetables and meats were entered in last week's recipe contest. The attractive chilled salad is typical of the colorful entries.

Get Children's Aid in Planning Summer Menu

Excellent Training for Them, It Also Will Lighten Burden for Mother.

By Louise Bennett Weaver.

LET your children take part in the household planning this vacation. They will enjoy the feeling of importance that comes from helping manage things. And it will lighten mother's burdens.

Right after the breakfast, each morning, let the children hold a conference while you sit by as an adviser. Let them note the supplies on hand, list leftovers, new supplies needed, personal food likes and dislikes. Stimulate discussions of menus and meal building—but be sure not to be bossy.

Since food costs usually are one of the main problems, the children should talk over expenses thoroughly. When it's practical let them buy the food themselves. If they should spend a few pennies unwisely now, the lesson should save them many dollars later in life.

Food-buying is excellent training for children. It generally stimulates their interest in the household. And once they get the full import of the variety of foods available, their qualities and methods of preparation they can accomplish a great deal by themselves.

Apportion the Work.

If there are several children in the family mother may assign different duties to each—cook, assistant cook, waitress and hostess. The assignments should be changed every now and then to keep things interesting. Small children can help peel vegetables, make French dressing, slice salad ingredients or frost cakes. They can help make iced tea and set the table.

When possible, children should plan meals for a couple of days in advance. Teach them to do as much of the work as possible in the morning—so they'll have the afternoons for play.

Don't Forget to Praise.

When the children become homemakers their table manners and personal appearance are almost bound to improve. They're less likely to fuss about the menus. Best of all, they'll take much less time in dishwashing, use fewer utensils in cooking and keep the kitchen in better order.

Be quick to praise when they've done a good job. And, once in a while, give them special treats, such as a picnic or a swimming party.

Calif. Valencia Oranges Are Ripe When Green

What is ripe when it is green? Certain plums and apples are. Everyone knows that.

But how about the orange? At this particular season housewives should know that a California Valencia orange with a green tinge is by no means an immature piece of fruit.

The tinge is only skin-deep. Many times this particular orange is better colored in December, when immature, than in the following August, when it is fully ripe.

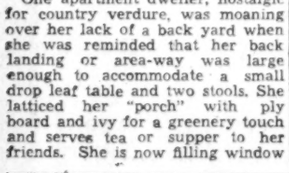
Avocado Pear, Watermelon Balls Is Delightful Summer Dish.

WHAT HOT-WEATHER appetizer do you and your family like? Is it a fresh sea-food cocktail, a fruit basket, melon cut or just plain, chilled fruit juices? In summertime eating slough, a few hostesses lose their creative urge; so the Forum has requested four clever homemakers' opinions. Here they are:

Avocado Cup.

Mrs. Paul G. Wilson, 4008 Sheetz avenue, Brentwood, Md.: "My family and I have recently returned from Miami, and while there I discovered an appetizer I will be glad to pass on to other Forum readers.



Halve an avocado pear after it has been thoroughly chilled. Into each half place several ice-cold watermelon balls, allowing the melon juice to seep slightly into the pear meat. Serve at once with long, thin cocktail forks. I served these appetizers on little paper plates and doilies, as they were always passed in the living room before a more formal dinner. As we had an avocado tree in our back yard in Florida, the fruit hors d'oeuvres were used upon many occasions to bridge that deadly gap between cocktails and dinner.

"Although I used to dislike the insipid taste of both watermelon and avocado, I find now that I enjoy their combined flavor. Their color combination of dark green and pink is cooling in itself. This Florida fruit cup has so much attraction for my small children that I often catch my daughter sampling the melon balls behind stealthily opened refrigerator doors."

Fish Roll Canape.

Mrs. Mary Graham Ireland, 719 Third street northeast: "There are many appetizing hors d'oeuvres which I use when I want to create an especially attractive dinner effect for my children's guests. I personally like sturgeon cocktail, but it seems like rather a wintry cocktail to me. Here is one summery idea I often use when I plan a one-dish hot meal. It is called fish-roll appetizer. My family says it is so delicious it is enough to make my daughter's best beau propose.

"Flake one ½-pound can of slightly drained tuna fish, add ¾ cup finely chopped celery, and ½ cup left-over cold vegetables (beans, carrots, peas or whatever is in the refrigerator). Marinate the ingredients in ¾ cup French dressing, then moisten with 1-3 cup mayonnaise. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Split four long soft rolls, butter, spread on mixture, and arrange a roll in individual lettuce cups. This makes a tempting approach to a hot casserole dish of braised meat, minted iced tea and a fruit sherbet.

Golden Gate Salad.

Mrs. John Schultz, 4206 Tenth street northeast: "Golden Gate appetizer is the most cooling dish I have come across. Ingredients for Golden Gate are flexible to suit the number served, but I often use a basis of two medium-sized cantaloupes. I make melon balls and mix these with one medium-sized can of grapefruit and one can of crushed or cubed pineapple. Fresh fruits may be used, if preferred, and cut into small pieces. I chill the mixture and mix it with lime fruit dressing which I usually make by melting lime jelly, adding a squeeze of lemon and the remaining juice from the canned pineapple and grapefruit, and mixing thoroughly. When my lime dressing and fruits are well blended. I heap them on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with whipped cream dressing. This dish may be used for a supper or luncheon, but I prefer it as an appetizer for a light dinner."

Fish Roll Appetizer Makes Good One-Dish Hot Meal.

Home-Made Tomato Juice.

Mrs. Roscoe Applegate, 1311 Taylor street northwest: "Among my favorite appetizers is broiled grapefruit which I top with brown sugar, and sometimes grape ice for color effect. This isn't as cooling, however, as my own recipe for homemade tomato juice. I prepare this nourishing juice myself from the fresh fruit.

"I cook two quarts of well-mashed tomatoes, adding 1 onion and 1 green pepper. After this has been cooked thoroughly to shreds, I rub the mass through a sieve and add salt and pepper to taste. This is delicious served with saltines . . . icy cold. In cooler weather I have the juice passed steaming hot in heat-proof sherbet cups. My family likes it so much that they always ring far more, so I have to can several quarts at a time."

Flavor, Color, Texture Important in Salads

Salads are good vehicles for summer leftovers, too, but at the same time you have to give them a little thought. You can't just throw together a lot of ingredients and expect a tasty dish to emerge. Choose the materials for each day's salad with an eye to flavor, color and texture. Be sure one of them gives you something to bite on—celery, cucumbers or green peppers, for instance. Cut or dice the vegetables or meat neatly. And serve your salads frosty cold, from a chilled bowl, on chilled plates.

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Nutritious and Delicious Beverage Desserts Are Excellent to Top Off the Summer Meal

Fresh Fruits Add Not Only to Flavor, but Also to Quality.

Float or Milkshake Is Ideal Refreshment at Child's Party.

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

"THE DISCOVERY of a new dish does more for the happiness of man than the discovery of a new star."

This sage comment was uttered more than 150 years ago by Brillat Savarin, the brilliant gastronomic authority. Eulogies are just as applicable today as in Savarin's fastidious era, for new food creations appeal to any normal homemaker's soul and palate.

Recently a delightful type of food beverage has crept into the popular fancy. It all began when milk and citrus fruit companies began experimenting with combinations of ice cream, sherbet, fresh fruit and dairy cream or milk. As a result, a delicious and highly nutritious beverage dessert has been born.

Best in Moderation.

On humid days the clink of an ice cube in a tumbler is apt to be more highly thought of than the ring of a dinner gong. Many visitors to Washington (and some natives, too) are so affected by the summer's heat that they submit themselves to liquid diets exclusively, although their sense of proportion should warn them that such foods must be taken in moderation. Hot-weather beverages should represent real food value, rather than mere refreshment, and supplement the regular meal-time fare.

Milkshakes and eggnogs containing rich nutritive quantities are valuable to heat-struck persons of all ages. Dietitians recommend milk as a foundation food in child feeding. It supplies high quality protein, so necessary for growth and tissue-building, at a low cost. Calcium and phosphorus, essential for the forming of bones and teeth, are readily obtained from milk.

Whole milk is a good source of vitamins A and G, and contains small quantities of the other vitamins. Milkshakes offer full value of milk, and in addition more calories in the form of chocolate, caramel, or fruit sirups.

Young folks enjoy making milkshakes at home. If given encouragement and with a little practice they can do as well as the boy behind the drugstore counter.

Sirup More Effective.

If the young folks—or their parents—go in for making their own milkshakes on hot summer days, a good egg beater and a bowl, or cocktail shaker will be needed besides the "makings."

The "makings," beside milk, should include some ready prepared sirups, plain, chocolate or caramel. Fruit sirups can be made by the addition of sirup to fresh fruit juice shortly before mixing time. A prepared sirup sweetens summer drinks more effectively than sugar. Sugar does not dissolve readily in cold liquids and tends to sink to the bottom of the pitcher or glasses.

Flavoring and spices, including vanilla and almond extracts, and nutmeg and cinnamon for "toppings" may also be helpful. A patch of mint growing in the back yard may furnish garnish as well as flavoring for the milkshakes.

Always add a bit of salt, as this is necessary to make a perfectly flavored milkshake—or any other summer drink. Moreover, the body loses large quantities of salt in perspiration during sweltering weather and this loss should be made good.

Keep Ingredients Cold.

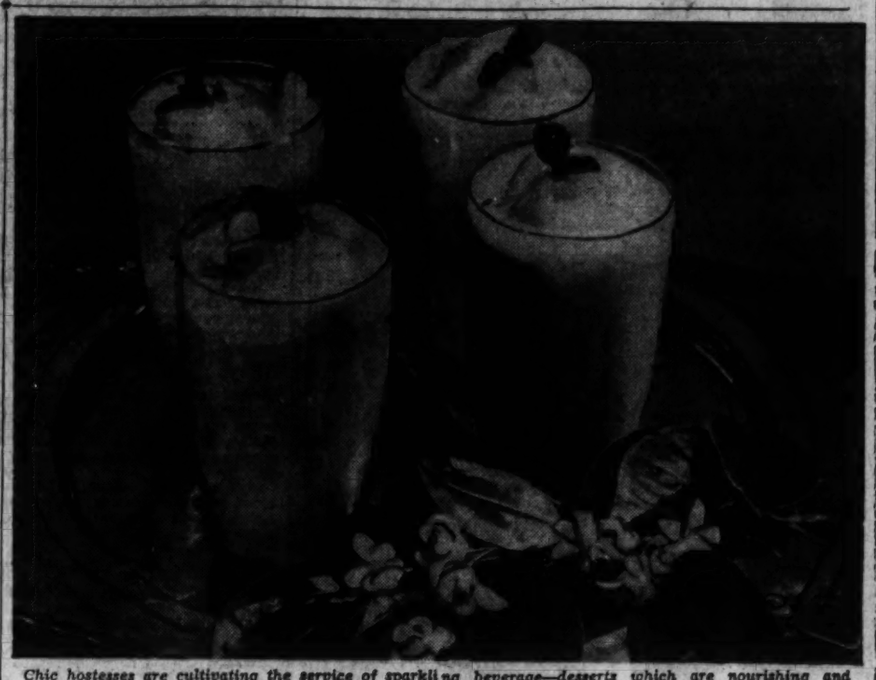
In preparing milkshakes be sure to have all utensils, as well as all ingredients as cold as possible—then work quickly. Pour into tall, chilled glasses and serve at once.

A "float" or milkshake topped with a dipper of ice cream, makes an ideal dessert for a children's party, or a luncheon or dinner. Always popular, especially with children, is the banana-milkshake, made by crushing a very ripe banana to a pulp and shaking to a smooth blend with cold milk.

The flavor of eggnog is often pleasing to those who do not care for milk. To prepare, add the other ingredients to the beaten egg, seasonings, and flavorings first, and beat thoroughly after each step. Beaten eggs may also be used in lemonade, or other fruitades, for additional nourishment.

Among summer drinks those made of real fruit juices are universal favorites.

With lemons and oranges obtainable at a moderate cost and fresh peaches running at the height of their season, advantage of these outstanding summery fruits might well be taken now. If your family has not been treated to a fresh beverage dessert yet, then why not plan your dinner this evening around this healthy food innovation? A menu which would highlight a beverage dessert might include hot, clear consomme, cold shrimp, aspic on greens, fried bananas, fresh green peas, little hot rolls and fresh raspberry float.



Chic hostesses are cultivating the service of sparkling beverage—desserts which are nourishing and thirst-quenching. These replace the depressing custom of providing both rich summertime desserts and overpowering beverages. Fresh fruit freeze (above) is but one of several new dessert drink recipes given here.

Chocolate Mint Shake.

DRINKING TIPS—A chocolate mint shake is appetizing. Mix two squares of chocolate, two-thirds of a cup of granulated sugar and one cup of water. Add a speck of salt and cook the combination slowly until its is thick and creamy.

Add four cups of milk and cook until smoking. Cool. Ad half a teaspoon of vanila and four drops of oil of peppermint. Serve in chilled glasses, top it with marshmallow or whipped cream and sprinkle a dash of cinnamon on it. (You may substitute two cups of coffee for the milk if you wish. Brown sugar will give a caramel flavor if you use it in place of the granulated sugar.)

For something different and very chilling, try a fizz. Here are the directions: Crush one bowl of fresh mint against a bowl with a spoon. Combine the mint with two cups each of granulated sugar and water. Simmer the combination ten minutes, then cool and strain. Add one cup each of lemon, orange, loganberry and pineapple juices to the mixture. Use one cup of this liquid for each eight glasses of iced water. Serve in glasses one-third filled with chopped ice.

To make a fruit cocktail, fill tall glass one-third full with any fruitade. Add chopped ice and ginger ale. Garnish with red cherries and mint leaves.

To give tart flavor to any of these fruit drinks add a cup of melted currant or plum jelly.

Peach Berry Float.

3 cups chilled peach nectar
1½ cups crushed blackberries or other seasonable berries
1 pint vanilla ice cream.

Combine nectar and berries and stir to blend. Pour mixture into six to eight glasses and add ice cream by large spoonfuls; do not stir. This recipe may be varied by the substitution of apricot, pear, plum. Serves six to eight.

Iced Mocha Chocolate.

(Makes 6 large glasses)
1 package chocolate pudding
4 cups milk
4 cups strong coffee
Few grains salt
6 tablespoons granulated sugar

Mix chocolate pudding with milk and bring to a boil. Add coffee, salt and sugar. Stir well and chill. Serve with ice, and if desired, with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Quick Red Raspberry Shrub.

3 cups crushed raspberries
¾ cup sugar
2 cups water
4 beets
2 lemons
Charged water

Boil together for 5 minutes the raspeberries, sugar, water and the beets which have been scraped and put in the food chopper. Strain and cool. To serve, add the juice of two lemons and enough crushed ice and charged water to make six tumblers. Add 1 scoop raspberry sherbet to each tumbler.

Pineapple Syllabub.

3 egg whites
¾ cup thick cream
6 tablespoons sugar
Few grains salt
2 cups pineapple juice

Beat the egg whites; add the cream and whip until frothy; add the sugar, salt and the pineapple juice add scoops of vanilla ice cream if desired. Add a little crushed ice, shake and serve.

CONSUMERS' COUNSEL

Preserving Recipe Requested by Mrs. Grenbaum; Hints for Preventing Summer Mold Given by Mrs. Shure; Other Comment Invited.

RESPONSE to the new Consumers Counsel Department has been encouraging to the Food Editor, because her belief that there was a need for self-expression for homemakers seems to be justified. All this week letters and telephone calls requested and suggested information on several current food topics. Requests for preserving hints have been received. Mrs. Joseph Grenbaum, 39 Florida avenue northwest, has been looking for a spicy method of preserving the inexpensive, plentiful peach. Here is a reliable tested recipe for you, Mrs. Greenbaum.

FRESH PEACH PRESERVE.

Peel 1 dozen peaches and put in kettle with 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon marshchino syrup, 1 tablespoon orange juice and a few gratings lemon rind. Sprinkle with 2 cups of sugar and let stand 3 hours. Put on heat over asbestos mat and cook very slowly 1½ hours or until transparent. Seal in glass jars.

PEACH JAM.

Peel 18 peaches; cut in halves and remove seeds. Put peaches and 5 whole oranges through food chopper, using coarse blade. Measure fruit; add 1½ times as much sugar as fruit. Cook until mixture sheets from spoon as for jelly. Add 1 cup chopped maraschino cherries. Pour into strilized glasses; cover with paraffin. Make about 5 pints.

For a perfect seal, paraffin twice. Pour over a thin coat of paraffin immediately after filling glasses. Cool and apply a heavier second coat, rolling glasses so paraffin seals along the sides. For the "jelly sheet test," lift a full spoon high. Pour slowly. Two drops of jelly will join to form a thin sheet and shear away from spoon. Repeat test two or three times.

Mrs. Hazel T. Shure, 8 Pine avenue, Takoma Park, Md., has graciously volunteered information on a subject which some housewives still hesitate to discuss. Mrs. Shure's enlightening comments on bread mold will be of interest to all progressive housewives. Her letter, however, will be of special value to occupants of tiny 1-room, kitchenette and baths, for overcrowded, overheated pantry quarters often create summer mold on bakery products unless jealously guarded.

Food Editor The Washington Post:

"I feel that the readers of your paper might enjoy the inclosed short article if you care to print it:

"Since the advent of ready-sliced bread, the summer mold has become interesting phenomena in every bread box, and it is with curious expectation that the housewife opens the box every morning. Sometimes she finds the old-fashioned green variety spotting the various slices of bread and this is always distasteful to the eye.

Then again the entire loaf will be specked with fine black spots or spots the color of red clay. But whatever the color or pattern of the mold, the bread that has been attacked by this summer monster must be consigned to the garbage can, for even the starlings in the yard prefer their bread without the moldy decoration. Bread can be safeguarded just as easily as one's skin or hair or eyes. Never overbuy bakery products, because no other food product runs to ruin more quickly in the heat. It's false economy to stock up on bread and rolls to such an extent that they must be discarded. Don't trifle with the care of your bread box. Keep it well aired and spotlessly clean. Wash it out carefully about once every week or so dependent on how cool and naturally sanitary your kitchen conditions are. Don't overcrowd a box with bread and a sticky or very spicy cake which might transfer its flavor or sickly sweet odor to bread."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 28.

THE LONELIEST and quietest place in all this seething Gehenna, during the month now swooning away, has been the marriage license bureau down at our Town Hall. Only the skittering of the office mice has broken the tragic silence of that usually busy and nervous spot.

ALICE HUGHES

On July 1, as you may know, a new State law went into effect requiring that wedding-bound couples submit to a simple blood test or furnish other satisfactory proof that they were free from communicable disease. For some insane reason, or for a daft melange of several, our young people just quit getting married. I have appalling figures before me. From July 1 to July 15, last year, 1,046 couples stepped to the fatal wicket at the Manhattan bureau and plunked down the $2. During the same period, this month, only 85 have been issued by the same office. Ever hear of anything so fantastic?

Any number of reasons pop into mind which, alone or in combination, might bring about this astonishing situation. Fear—or misunderstanding of the new statute—or superstition—or just plain ignorance. Add them all and we can probably adduce the cause for this mass desertion of the holy estate.

Our State and town officials are doing what they can to lift this astounding fog. Complete instructions and explanations are freely offered to men and women who want to get married. So far, free booklets have produced no stimulation. Of course, they might try free licenses, too. But this is no joshing matter, but a serious and somewhat frightening commentary on the mass psychology of a great and enlightened metropolis. What do you make of this business?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—It's the dawn of the dog days, all right, but don't bark yet . . .

Four days a week the good ship Col. Clayton takes 300 mothers and tots from the tenements for a cooling sail on the Hudson. Strictly a hen party—but last week a man crashed the ship for the first time in the history of the enterprise. Mr. Oscar Levy looked so sad and forlorn as he saw his wife and 18-month-old son board the ship that Miss Sonia Eliff, the boss, relented and let the bereft papa aboard. Oscar was very shy about the whole thing, and Sonia warned the public that this lone crasher had set no precedent. Mamas only! . . .

Rumors are dawdling feebly through the smarter saloons that Mrs. Harrison (Ten-Best-Dressed-Women) Williams is going to give up her collection of American homes and spend practically all of her time on the Isle of Capri. She is said to be extra fond of that Italian retreat because she doesn't have to live up to her publicity, and can mosey around in sloppy slacks if she chooses. Well, if it's all right with Capri, I guess it's all right with our town . . .

Three famous Hollywood clothes-designers descended on us in a body, and showed a lot of their West Coast creations to the local girls. The lads are Howard Greer, Travis Banton and Walter Plunkett, and very clever they are. Greer's Hollywood stories top any I've ever heard, if he's in the mood and among discreet friends. As for Walter Plunkett, he has the plum of designing the rigouts for "Gone With the Wind," as he has been specializing in period clothes for years.

Mrs. Stone Sketching Scenes on Rockies Trip

Wife of Supreme Court Justice Will Be Able to Give Friends Interpretation of Her Vacation Upon Return in Autumn.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

When Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone returns to Washington late in the autumn her friends will have the opportunity to see her interpretation of scenes she and Justice Stone now are enjoying in the Canadian Rockies. From Chateau Lake Louise comes word that she is making a series of watercolor sketches of mountain, lake and glacier scenes on the daily hikes she and the Justice are taking over picturesque trails around the resorts.

Upon leaving Lake Louise within the next few days she and Justice Stone will proceed to Banff for a stay at the Banff Springs Hotel before returning to their summer home in Maine. Chances are, many of the sketches begun in Canada will be finished either in Maine or in Washington, but if Mrs. Stone continues painting on through the summer she will have enough new pictures by the time she returns to give another exhibition.

Last summer while on a trip to Mexico, she started many pictures that later were finished for her display at the Corcoran Art Gallery. Her many friends here have urged her to have another exhibition next year, and if the good work goes on, she may have enough new pictures to do so. She and Justice Stone are expected to return to Washington late in September.

George Duca Leaves for Alaska

Speaking of Canada—George Duca, popular second secretary of the Rumanian Legation, will be spending part of his vacation there before long—but he will visit a number of other places, chiefly parks, first. Late yesterday afternoon, he left by plane for Yellowstone National Park. He will go from there to Glacier Park and then to Seattle, whence he will sail August 5 for Alaska.

From Alaska he will proceed to Vancouver to visit friends, and from there he will go to Mount Ranier Park to round out his tour of some of the Northwest's outstanding beauty spots. Returning to the United States, he will come East early in September, stopping in New York for a brief visit and concluding the entire vacation around Labor Day.

In no summer prior to this have diplomats traveled so widely in the United States. Time was, when any of them had as much as a month's vacation, a trip to the homeland was indicated. Now, the slogan "See America first" seems to have been adopted by at least one member on every legation and embassy staff.

Meanwhile, however, from lands across the sea have recently come several former residents to see America again. Among the latest to arrive is Theo Lacy Edmiston, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmiston, of Washington, who is making his first visit to his home country in almost five years. With him is his wife, who has never seen the United States before. In early spring the young couple left their home in Harbin, Manchuria, where Mr. Edmiston is an official of the National City Bank of New York. Traveling by way of the Suez Canal, he and his wife arrived in Manhattan on the S. S. Washington a week ago.

Edmistons to Be Feted Sunday

They came to the Capital directly and will remain here for some time before going South to visit relatives in Arkansas and Texas. The daughter of Alexander Havaeff, of Harbin, Mrs. Edmiston was Miss Anastasia Alexandrovna Havaeff before her marriage in 1934. At that time, Mr. Edmiston had been in banking business in the Orient for five years, having gone there shortly after being graduated from the University of Arkansas.

Since their arrival in Washington, many of Mr. Edmiston's former classmates—he attended high school here—have met his attractive wife. She is of medium height and has dark brown hair and wide gray eyes. She speaks flawless English and is unusually vivacious. Both she and her husband have a fascinating store of accounts of their trip here—a journey that brought them through China, Indo-China, India, Egypt, France and England.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmiston, sr., will be at home Sunday afternoon in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, who then will have an opportunity to see many friends who knew the younger Mr. Edmiston before he left Washington to carve his career in the Orient.

Assisting in receiving will be Mrs. Morris Sheppard, one of the few Senatorial hostesses still in Washington; Mrs. William Walton Badgley, Mrs. Lotus Van Huss, Mrs. Craig Leslie Reddish, Mrs. Charles Edward Pledger, jr., and Mrs. Paul William Ontrich.

Two in Race For Auxiliary Presidency

Miss Reagan, Miss Hardy Are Candidates for Legion Honor.

District Department to Hold Conference on August 12-13.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Two candidates are in the race for the presidency of the District of Columbia Department, American Legion Auxiliary, which will hold its annual convention at the Carlton August 12 and 13. They are Miss Lillian Reagan, of Henry C. Spengler Unit, who was up for the same office last year, and Miss Minnie May Hardy, of Treasury Unit.

Miss Reagan has been a member of the auxiliary for 10 years and was vice president of the department when Mrs. Marie Dyer, president of her unit, headed the department. Mrs. Dyer and members of Spengler are backing her candidacy this year. She has also served as department secretary, parliamentarian, publicity and membership chairman, and has been delegate to five national conventions, serving on national committees.

Miss Hardy has been a member of the Treasury Unit for the past three years and has served as its president for two. She has also been vice president of the department for the past year and has been a delegate to two national conventions. As chairman of child welfare for the department she drafted a resolution on training for parenthood which was adopted by the District organization and later by the national, at its convention two years ago

Auxiliary Membership Has Shown Increase

Interest in the coming election centers around the two candidates and it is not expected that any "dark horse" will enter the field. The incoming president will succeed Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, who has served for the past year. A president, having served one year, is ineligible for re-election.

Three new units have been formed during Mrs. Harper's presidency, the Mack Alexander, Cooley-McCullough and Second Division, and membership in the department has been increased from 1,514 to 2,159. One of the units whose substantial gain has contributed to this number is Spengler, which has grown from a membership of 79 to 194 during the past season.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, of Washington, a past president, will be among the official guests at the convention. Social affairs in connection with it will include a luncheon on August 13, and a dinner, arrangements for which are under way, with Mrs. Leon Arnold, chairman, of the past presidents' parley, in charge. There will be a business meeting on Saturday afternoon for the nomination of candidates.

Juniors to Hold Morning Conference

There will also be a conference of the American Legion Auxiliary Juniors on Saturday morning with Mrs. Richard R. Ralph as chairman.

The following are the units comprising the department, with the presidents who have served during the year: Kenneth H. Nash, Mrs. Belda Mulbey; Henry C. Spengler, Mrs. Marie Dyer, re-elected; Sergt. Jasper, Mrs. Mary McMillan; Vincent B. Costello, Mrs. Mary Kehoe; Lincoln Unit, Miss Leah B. Fuller; George E. Killeen, Mrs. Viola Fones; James E. Walker, Mrs. Harriet Epps; Victory, Mrs. Eula Hollis; Stephen P. McGroarty, Miss Faustine Dennis; Washington Police Unit, Mrs. Ola D. Lee; Government Printing Office, Mrs. Helen Mahoney; United States Treasury, Mrs. Marguerite Hicks, United States Agriculture, Mrs. Dorothy Blake; Mack Alexander Unit, Mrs. Edith Hayden; Potomac, Miss Irene Sheehan; James Reed Europe, Mrs. Louise Patrick; Cooley-McCullough, Mrs. Edith Landvoigt; McKenna-Main, Mrs. Myrtle Spuddis; Second Division, Bertha M. Angevine.

CLAUDIA RICE SCOTT, an active member of the D. A. R. and of the Entre Nous Club, is spending her vacation at Park View Inn, Berkeley Springs, W. Va., right in the midst of Revolutionary history. The inn is situated facing the State park. Berkeley Springs was established as a town in 1776 and the famous springs were given to the public by Fairfax. Virginia treated her sick soldiers there and lots on the townsite were bought by Gen. Washington, Gen. Buchanan, Gen. Gates and Charles Carroll.

One of the historic landmarks is a tree which was planted by Washington. Mrs. Scott has been watching a tree surgeon treat it while she has been there and learned from him he expects it to live at least another century.

BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Hole in the Lawn.

A thing that is none can deny;
None but the foolish ever try.
Farmer Brown's Boy.

It was Sue who discovered the hole in the lawn. It was a small hole, only a wee bit over an inch and a half across. It was almost hidden in the grass and was only a few feet out from the shrubbery that grew close to the house. Still it was right out in the open and that seemed a queer place for any one to dig a hole. She poked a small stick down that hole. It went down for perhaps a foot and a half and stopped. Either that was the bottom of the hole there or it made a sharp turn. She couldn't decide which.

Sue was on the point of asking her cousin, Farmer Brown's boy, who could have made that hole then decided not to. She was always going to Tommy with such questions and he was inclined to tease her because she was a city girl and didn't know much about things in the country. She would try and find out for herself who or what had made that hole. However, she did show it to her brother, Sammy.

It was Sue who discovered the hole in the lawn

"Probably it is a snake's hole," said Sammy with the air of one who knows all about such things.

"I don't believe it," declared Sue. "How can a snake dig a hole in solid earth? He hasn't anything to dig with."

This stumped Sammy. "Anyway, snakes go in holes in the ground," said he rather lamely.

"If a snake made that hole what did it do with the earth?" demanded Sue.

This was another poser, for there wasn't so much as a grain of loose sand around that hole in the ground. "Well, for that matter what did any body who made that hole do with the earth that came out of it? If you dig a hole you have to put the dirt somewhere," retorted Sammy.

"Perhaps it wasn't dug. Perhaps Tommy or some one else drove a crowbar or a stick down there and then pulled it out," suggested Sue.

"Probably that's it," replied Sammy, and lost all interest in the hole.

But Sue didn't. Somehow she couldn't rid herself of the feeling that that hole had been dug. Several times that afternoon she returned to it and each time she was more sure that it hadn't been made by a crowbar or a stick. But it not, where was the earth that had come out of it? There would be quite a pile of earth from a hole a foot and a half deep and over an inch and a half across. What had become of it? Here was a puzzle. Sue liked puzzles, but here was one of Old Mother Nature's that didn't give her even a hint to start on.

"I guess I will just have to watch and see who occupies it," thought she, and thereafter spent a lot of time within sight of that hole. It was in vain. At no time did she see any one at that hole or even near it.

"Who digs a hole and carts off the sand?" she asked of Tommy at the table that night. Tommy looked at her quizzically. "I'll bite," said he. "Who does?"

"I don't know. That is what I want to know," replied Sue in a tone of exasperation.

"I thought it was a conundrum, and I'm no good at conundrums," explained Tommy.

"Well, it isn't a conundrum; its a puzzle, and I want to know the answer," retorted Sue.

"If I knew I would tell you," replied Tommy.

"Do you mean to tell me, Tommy Brown, that you don't know of any one who digs holes and carries away the sand that comes out of them?" demanded Sue.

Tommy shook his head. "I can't think of anybody right this minute," said he. "Why all this interest in holes? Have you found one?"

Sue nodded. "And it hasn't so much as one grain of sand around it, nor a pebble, nor anything at all to show that it was dug," she said.

Tommy's good-natured freckled face broke into a grin. "It seems to be sort of a mystery hole. I'll have to have a look at it after supper," said he.

So confident is the White House kitchen cabinet about 1940 that they think Eleanor Roosevelt could win the Presidency from any Republican candidate . . . Even those who scoffed at her in 1934 tend to take her seriously now . . . Mrs. Roosevelt and Jack Garner (remember his $5,000,000,000 public works program in 1932?) have gained more ground than any American notables this decade.

POTOMAC PIFFLE: Some of the boys who know their way around are taking their naps in the air-cooled Senate offices these warm days . . . As for the nights—the cooling system is turned off at 5 o'clock . . . It's a pity that things like the Russo-Jap border incidents must mar a beautiful friendship like that between their envoys in Washington.

The cutest political trick of the year was Senator Pat McCarran's presentation of a mess of fish to President Roosevelt . . . It came after the President had been "throwing a fish" to many a candidate mouthing for it like a seal, and it forced FDR to "throw a fish" to roly-poly Pat.

• • • •

Though Joe Kennedy was almost an innocent bystander, that article about Jimmy

"—an exchange of fish."

Roosevelt as an insurance go-getter may have hurt Joe more than Jimmy, who seems well-nigh impervious . . . It has put a little dent in Joe's Presidential prospects, which were as good as the next man's . . . Insurance is odorless, but the article painted Joe as a whisky salesman, and whisky has quite an aroma in the wide-open spaces.

• • • •

MEN IN UNIFORM: If a Berlin correspondent were to accompany the President on a look-see across the land, he could send home sensational stories about the uniforms that pop up like dragons' teeth along his route . . . It could be made to rival the varicolored uniforms in the human ramparts that shield Hitler from his fate.

"—Hitler'd die of envy."

Rarely does Roosevelt have a human rampart, unless local authorities are overdiligent . . . But I have seen loosely massed within range of his peerless smile, as alert as so many doorkeepers at a political convention, and all in different uniforms: Boy Scouts, deputy sheriffs, State troopers, National Guardsmen, Sea Scouts, city police, Regular Army soldiers, Campfire Girls, firemen, telegraph messengers, Legionnaires, high school cadets, village constables and men in fezzes.

• • • •

Hitler would die of envy . . . But these American shock troops are mostly volunteers; they weren't ordered out by the War Department; they were drawn by lively curiosity, and you couldn't keep them away with a fire hose . . . But to a gullible stranger that's more uniforms than you'd see in a Friedrichstrasse beer hall.

• • • •

The White House outer guards smile tolerantly at Republican jibes about what happened to the Roosevelt magazine and newspaper profits that were to be turned over to a noble cause . . . Shrewd observers think that at a strategic climax in the campaign the noble cause will be announced, and it will be so noble that the scoffers will be covered with confusion.

Minimum Wages Fixed for Capital Beauty Operators

The District Minimum Wage Board yesterday officially fixed minimum wages for beauty shop employes, effective September 26.

The only change made in the rates formerly announced was to eliminate students of beauty culture schools from a provision setting the minimum wage at $13.

Otherwise, the rates are:

Licensed operators, $18 for a 36- to-48 hour week; part-time work, 50 cents an hour; over-time rate 50 cents.

Cashiers, telephone operators and clerks, $17 a week; 40 cents an hour over-time or part-time.

Maids and cleaners, $14.50 a week; 35 cents an hour for over-time or part-time.

Learners with 500 hours experience, $13 a week for the first five months, $15 a week for next four months, and $16 a week thereafter.

Sailors on Horseback Stage Pony Rodeo on Chincoteague

Post Staff Photos.

Arnold Daly, 20, of 1227 Forty-fifth place southeast, is shown in upper picture winning a prize for riding one of the wild little Chincoteague Island ponies at the round-up yesterday. Jack Boyd (lower), who lives in Alexandria, told the round-up crowd he was an Illinois cowboy and rode the horse posing with him through an exciting exhibition of bucking.

By Marshall Andrews.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chincoteague, Va.—Fifteen thousand visitors to this island milled today under a beating sun, saw pony races and a rodeo and bought 125 little Chincoteague ponies for an aggregate of $4,500.

Despite the tremendous heat there were no casualties among guests from most of the United States but one pony died of sunstroke.

Events started early with a round-up of 150 ponies at 8 a. m. Driven down the town's main street, the ponies were penned with those rounded up yesterday and the day before and were placed at auction.

Purchasers loaded their ponies, mostly yearling colts, into trucks, trailers and even into rear seats of automobiles and started home. This was accomplished with no end of squealing and fighting on the part of the animals. With ponies' heads thrust out their windows, automobiles began leaving here this afternoon across the long causeway which connects Chincoteague Island with the Eastern Shore of Virginia. Whinnying ponies peered over the tail-gates of trucks and teetered on trailers.

The fourteenth annual roundup of Chincoteague ponies was ended.

After the roundup, owners of broken ponies gathered them for a series of races along Smith Street in the heart of the town.

All races were won by Islanders for prizes of $15 for each race.

Robert Beebe took the first race, Mrs. Edna Whiting the second (these races were open to anyone who had a pony to ride), and the third was won by Elwood Quillen.

Back at the pens after the races, ambitious young men essayed to ride unbroken ponies from the wild islands which surround Chincoteague. Snared with lines looped on oyster stakes, the ponies were led to a tight little corral, where they were held fast while the amateur brone-busters mounted them. The sides of the corral were pulled away and the pony and rider left to fight it out between themselves.

Washington Man Wins.

First prize was taken by Arnold Daly, 20, of 1227 Forty-fifth place southeast, Washington, who rode a mean little mare out of the corral and into the milling herd of ponies. He was bucked off before he got well started, swung himself again to the little mare's bare back and rode three minutes to take the prize.

A wiry young stallion tore the corral to pieces and thereby delayed proceedings until it could be repaired.

Jack Boyd, of Alexandria, who said he was born in Illinois, but talked in the dialect of the Western plains, mounted a horse and put on an exhibtion of bronc riding—just to give the folks their money's worth.

Attired in overalls, a worn 10-galloon hat, undershot boots and long spurs, Jack was the one reasonable picture in this carnival of sailors on horseback.

"I been a-ridin' this horse two years," said he, "and he ain't bucked a lick. But I reckon he'll buck if I scratch him."

So he climbed aboard with only a loose rope to hold him in place, swung his spurred boots against the horse's shoulders and had his prediction borne out in full measure. He bucked through grassy salt marsh until the horse charged the crowd which fled without dignity.

"I don't know if you folks is satisfied," Jack remarked when he got back on his feet, "or disgusted. Anyhow I done my best."

He said he has ridden "bucking stock" with several wild west shows, ending with Col. Tim McCoy's circus which folded in Washington.

Firemen Net $3,500.

E. L. Jones, chief of the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Department, which promotes the pony penning and auction in connection with its annual carnival, said this year's carnival would net the firemen about $3,500. That amount will be applied on payments for their fire house built in 1930.

Tomorrow 325 ponies will be driven back to the four islands on which they live, to nibble marsh grass and raise a crop of colts for next year's auction. They will be driven back by members of the volunteer fire department who brought them here by swimming Assateague Channel and by flat-boats across Chincoteague Bay and Chincoteague Inlet.

In the pens off Chincoteague's main street they will be herded again to fight and squeal and raise a most uncommon amount of dust as they did yesterday and today. Visitors will come again from every State in the Union to buy the husky little fellows as pets, to train them and turn them over to their children to ride.

The Chincoteague pony penning is by way of becoming a national institution. The volunteer fire department sees great things for the future and swears by the little beasts that it believes swam ashore from the wreck of a Spanish ship in the fourteenth century. That many islanders nurse bruises today is a minor matter. Chincoteague's great two days are over; the island may turn back again to its fish and oysters and clams and forget horses for another year.

G.H.A. Suggests Peace Proposal To Hospitals

Kirkpatrick Plan Asks Recognition in One Institution.

Group Health Association will delay indefinitely, if not drop altogether, its plan to build a hospital of its own if one or more Washington hospitals open facilities to G. H. A., it was indicated yesterday.

William C. Kirkpatrick, president of the Federal employes' medical cooperative, revealed that he had asked 10 District hospitals and the Washington Sanatorium at Takoma Park, Md., to extend courtesy privileges to Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director and surgeon of G H. A.

In addition, he made a similar request of Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital in behalf of Dr. Virginius Dabney, the clinic's ear, nose and throat specialist.

"As a result of the court decision upholding the legality of G. H. A., I received 20 offers today of sites for a hospital," Kirkpatrick said.

"The first one was by telephone at 6:30 a. m., getting me out of bed.

"However, if even one general hospital will reconsider and grant us ordinary courtesy privileges, allowing our members to be admitted for treatment by our staff men, the association plans for its own hospital will be at least deferred."

The applications were addressed to presidents of the various institutions' boards of trustees. If the response is favorable, courtesy privileges will be asked for other members of G. H. A.'s seven-man staff, as well as for the three physicians who are to be added next month, Kirkpatrick intimated.

Although Dr. Mario Scandiffio, the staff pediatrician, was expelled from the District Medical Society several months ago because of his affiliation with G. H. A., his privileges in four or five local hospitals have not been revoked "as far as I know," Kirkpatrick said.

He emphasized, however, that the urgent need is for hospital facilities to perform surgical operations.

Meanwhile, the antitrust division of the Department of Justice continued its investigation of the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society, with Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold again declining yesterday to discuss the inquiry.

The study has been under way for several weeks and a report is expected soon.

10,000 Warned Of Tax Penalty; Deadline Nears

More than 10,000 Washington business and professional men face penalties if they do not file business privilege tax returns before the end of the week, A. F. Brooke, tax administrator, announced yesterday.

Although only a day and a half of the month remain, only about 9,000 returns have been received out of an expected 20,000 Brooke said.

"There will be no extensions," Brooke warned. "Any return that is not filed at this office before the closing hour tomorrow or placed in the mail before midnight Sunday will be subject to the 10 per cent penalty."

The law proscribes that the District may impose a 10 per cent penpenalty the first month and 5 per cent each additional month that the return is late.

Some 3,000 more returns are anticipated this year over last year, because of the inclusion of returns from real property, Brooke said.

After August 1 Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen plans to take full advantage of the law in summoning businessmen who have failed to file returns. The District, in such cases, may either make arbitrary assessments, it was said, or else examine the books of the delinquent taxpayer.

Parks Sought As Curb for Auto Deaths

D. C. Officials Recommend Reopening of 13 Playgrounds.

Inquests Today for Two Traffic Fatalities; One Is Injured.

City recreation officials yesterday recommended that 13 city playgrounds be reopened during the summer months to help reduce toll of child traffic accidents.

Meanwhile, one person was injured in an accident as coroner's inquests were set today in the recent deaths of Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, 1308 Sixteenth street northwest, former prohibition administrator, and Sam Bernstein, 2129 Eighteenth street northwest, cab driver.

The traffic victim yesterday, John H. Hammond, 53, 1203 Eleventh street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts received when struck by a car at Fifteenth and I streets northwest. Police said the driver was Ralph B. Hagenbush, 28, 1748 W street northwest.

The recreation officials recommended opening of the playgrounds despite the fact that surveys revealed that all six of the children killed in traffic accidents this summer lived within easy walking distance of supervised playgrounds.

Grounds Held Inadequate.

The recommendation was made because the WPA and other agencies had offered additional supervision, equipment and supplies to reopen playgrounds closed for the summer due to lack of funds.

Officials, headed by Lewis R. Barrett, recreation co-ordinator, wished to call attention to the fact that of the 175 schools, many have grounds which are inadequate for use as supervised play spaces during the summer.

Officials also called attention to the fact two of the six deaths were of children so young that they could not reach playgrounds safely unless accompanied by older persons.

They added they felt most urgent need at the present time is additional funds for development, improvement and operation of areas already owned or acquired in accordance with the recreation system plan.

Officials attending the meeting were Miss Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Elizabeth K Peeples, Birch Bayh. Richard Tennyson, Dr E. B Henderson, T. C. Jeffers, Edward Kelly, representing the Community Center Department, Playgrounds Department, National Capital Parks, National Parks and Planning Commission

Investigated Six Deaths.

Earlier, Dr. Chester W. Holmes, acting superintendent of schools, said he had investigated the six juvenile traffic deaths and said:

"This clearly cannot be blamed on the schools. After all, the parents have some responsibility."

Playgrounds officials recommended be reopened are Fort Bayard Park, Pierce Mill, Fort Dupont Park, Lincoln Park, Fort Stanton Park, Oyster School, Keene School, Truesdale, Randle Highlands, Dennison, Morse, Garnet-Patterson, and Langston-Slater schools.

At the same time, Herbert L. Willett, director of the Community Chest, took occasion to point out that all Chest agencies dealing with children have expanded their summer programs in an effort to keep more children off the street.

"Children must get out of doors this kind of weather," said Willett, "and if they cannot find a playgrpund, they are going to play in the streets. This means more accidents and more fatalities."

A 9-year-old boy, Jerry Mellett, of 1426 Potomac avenue southeast, suffered a fractured skull when he was struck by an auto in the 100 block of Fifteenth street southeast. He was said to be in a serious condition at Gallinger Hospital. The car that struck him, police said, was driven by John Smith, colored, 25, of the 1800 block of Twenty-fifth street southeast.

Struck by an auto at Sixteenth street and Constitution avenue, Gregory Malakias, 46, of Weirton, W. Va., suffered a fractured leg and a brain concussion. He was taken to Emergency Hospital. Police said he was hit by a car operated by Thomas L. Costello, 22, of 612 A street northeast.

Maj Dalrymple died in Emergency Hospital Tuesday from injuries received early Sunday when he was hit in the 1600 block of Connecticut avenue by an automobile police said was driven by Douglas H. Vincent, 22, 1739 Nineteenth street, northwest.

Bernstein was struck in the 2000 block of Fourteenth street, northwest, by a taxicab driver, according to police, by Ralph R. Winslow, 26, of Arlington, Va.

Richard M. Ham, director of safety of the A. A. A. District Motor Club will speak on recent traffic deaths involving children at the Accident Prevention Institute in the Police Court Building tonight.

Blind Child Asks Camp Vacation for Deaf Pal; Post Presents Last 10 Cases of 100 Neediest

Gift of $14 Will Give Devoted Pair 2-Weeks at Health Retreat.

This is a unique plea from a totally blind child on behalf of his totally deaf friend.

Ten-year-old Willie, who never has known what it means to see, was given money for a two-week vacation by the camp scholarship committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

When he was notified of his luck, he announced he would not accept the money unless a similar gift was provided for his buddy, 10-year-old Charley, who never has known what it means to hear.

Ever since he can remember, he has been ears for Charley and Charley has been eyes for him. He cannot understand why the team should be broken up this summer just because Charley failed to apply for a camp scholarship before the committee's fund were exhausted.

So it'll be camp for both or for neither.

A contribution of $14 will cover Charley's tuition and send the devoted pair off to camp together.

Donations are still being accepted to swell the $661.02 already contributed to the camp fund for Washington's 100 underprivileged children.

Contributions may be mailed to The Post Camp Fund Editor or dropped in the camp fund box on the first floor of The Post Building.

The ninety-second child on the list of 100 is Alfred, aged 7, who lives alone with his father in a damp basement room, the floor of which is bare earth. Life wasn't so bad for Al while school was in session. But during the summer, when there is no one to look after him, he must trail around from job to job with his father, a day laborer. Dietitians would blanch at the thought of his daily menu, which consists of hot dogs handed to him whenever he becomes hungry.

Alfred has had so many hot dogs in the last few weeks that he seldom gets hungry any more. He probably doesn't know what the word vegetable means. Camp would teach him its meaning and build up his scrawny, undernourished little frame.

Willy, aged 12, is the only one of six brothers and sisters who is below average mentally. Willy's mother sympathizes with him and is kind—when she is home. But as the widowed mother of a large family, she must work long hours to make the $10 a week on which she supports her children. Willy is left at home to be tormented by his brothers and sisters, to whom his plight is funny. Training in hobbies and sports adapted to his mentality would erase his feelings of inadequacy and discouragement.

A pair of fast-living older brothers menace the welfare of 13-year-old Janet and her sister, Lois, aged 10. A home crowded with a family of seven makes it hard for them to escape bad influences. Their widowed mother would like to see them get away this summer, but by the time her $18 salary has been spread over the whole family there is little left for such luxuries as camp.

An unfortunate influence also is undermining the three Gray brothers, age 8, 7 and 5. Their mother has had a child a year since 1928, but as the family grew in size the father became less and less independent. He found that with relief money and occasional assistance from several local agencies he could manage nicely. His loss of independence gradually is seeping through the rest of the family. Unless something is done soon to bolster up their self-reliance, the three little boys will go through life on relief.

Illness struck twice at the Green family last year and accounts for the ninety-eighth and ninety-ninth cases on the camp fund list. Two of the six children of the family, which occupies a tiny four-room flat, required hospitalization during the winter and never have regained their health. Twelve-year-old Lucia was ill for eight weeks. Her brother, Bobby, 10, underwent a dangerous mastoid operation. Their mother makes about $20 weekly, not enough to pay off the debts her unemployed husband left at his death last fall and far from enough to send her two sickly children to camp.

Jerry, 13, 100th on the fund list, stands at the crossroads where good health and invalidism meet. He left Glenn Dale Sanatarium last spring, cured of tuberculosis and in the best of health. But his pink cheeks and vitality didn't stand a chance when he gave up the good food, regular life and fresh air of the sanatarium for the privations of his poverty stricken home. He has become pale, underweight and listless. He is at the age where he must fight off a recurrence of the disease or start a lifelong battle with it. His story appears at the last of the list, but the severity of his need ranks him among the first.

Poet Kilmer's Son Gets Permit to Wed In Arlington Today

Christopher Kilmer, 20-year-old son of the author of the poem, "Trees," will be married today to Miss Alberta Taylor Daniel, 22, it was learned yesterday when a license was issued in Arlington County, Va., where the ceremony will take place.

Kilmer, under legal age, had his mother's permission for the marriage. Miss Daniel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Chesley Daniel, of Oxford, N. C.

Joyce Kilmer, father of the prospective groom, was killed in action in July, 1918, while with the "Fighting Sixty-ninth," part of the Rainbow Division. The poet, who became a sergeant, was killed while his regiment was crossing the River Ourq in the American offensive that began at Chateu Thierry.

16 WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Silly Solons.

Detroit, July 28.—The New York Boxing Commission, labeled long ago by the late Bill McGeehan as the Three Dumb Dukes, hasn't changed much. Its latest judicial gem is the ruling that young Mr. Al Hostak, of Seattle, is not the middleweight champion of the world.

POVICH

All that young Hostak did, it seems, was to knock out the universally recognized middleweight champion of the world in one minute and 43 seconds of the first round. But nevertheless and notwithstanding, the New York Commission says that Hostak is not the champion.

Hostak's chief sin was, apparently, that he knocked out Champion Freddy Steele in Seattle and not in New York. It seems that the Seattle bout did not have the blessings of the Three Dumb Dukes who insisted that Fred Apostoli and not Hostak was the No. 1 challenger for the middleweight title.

Some Concession!

Apostoli was the man they deemed most likely to win Steele's title, despite the fact that Apostoli didn't win it the last time the pair met, over a 15-round distance. So, the New York Commission has declared the title vacant because Steele refused to meet Apostoli in a return bout.

The Commission hasn't turned thumbs down on Hostak entirely, however. Very graciously, the commission has said that if Hostak beats the winner of an Apostoli-Young Corbet bout, he would earn recognition as champion. That is quite a concession to the man who has already knocked out the reigning champion in one round.

The Three Dumb Dukes aren't consistent, however. Only a year ago, they suspended Jimmy Braddock for refusing to meet Max Schmeling for the heavyweight title. Schmeling, following his knockout of Joe Louis, was automatically advanced to the position of No. 1 challenger and the New York Commission decreed that the German must have the next shot at Braddock's crown.

Nuts to Them!

But the Commission's ruling didn't intimidate Braddock. He went out to Chicago and fought Joe Louis, in consideration of part ownership in Louis if the Negro won his title, and got away with it nicely. Louis won the title and came back to New York recognized as the champion.

The Commission has erred before. We seem to remember that in 1926, the original Three Dumb Dukes ran the Gene Tunney-Jack Dempsey fight out of New York. Tunney, they said, wasn't a fit contender for Dempsey's title. They wouldn't stand for any mismatch. Rickard was forced to take the match to Philadelphia's Sesquicentennial stadium where, you remember, the over-matched Mr. Tunney licked the stuffing out of Champion Dempsey.

There isn't any particular reason why Hostak should be worried by the New York Commission's ruling. In the eyes of the world, exclusive of the three gentlemen who sit at Albany, Hostak is the legitimate middleweight champion and recognized in the 40-odd States affiliated with the National Boxing Association.

And another thing, unlike most other weight classes, the middleweight division does not need New York. For the featherweights, the lightweights, the welters and most of the heavyweights, New York is the only town that represents big money. But, happily for Hostak, that doesn't apply to his division.

Seattle Is Tops.

In fact, the middleweight capital of the world happens to be Hostak's home town of Seattle. Strangely, the West Coast has has produced every top-ranking middleweight of recent years—Steele, Apostoli, young Corbett, Glen Lee, and now Hostak himself.

The Hostak-Steel bout at Seattle the other evening drew 30,000 customers. Never in the past ten years has a middeweight fight in New York drawn that kind of a gate. Middleweights are big stuff on the Coast. They don't need New York, as we were saying.

Freddie Steele, who ruled the middleweights for three years, fought only once in New York. Why? Because he saw no reason to cut New York politicians and racketeers into his purses. For the same reason, Henry Armstrong and Petey Sarron stayed out of New York for a long while, until they could get their price.

So Hostak will probably tell the commission to take its ruling and eat it, if it likes. He DID knock out the champion and he doesn't need New York.

Kibler, Williams In Tennis Finals.

Dorothy Kibler, of Burroughs Playground, and Harriet Williams, of Chevy Chase, will clash this morning in what is predicted to be one of the best finals in years of the Department of Playgrounds tennis championship. Play is to start at 10 o'clock at Chevy Chase Playground.

Neither player was pushed to reach the finals, and both depend chiefly on a strong forehand to garner points. Miss Williams' service also carried her through several tight spots. Maude N. Parker, tournament director, expects the match to go three hard sets.

In the finals last year Lucille McDowell's machine-like shots brought her victory over Hazel Bishopp, of Takoma. But Miss McDowell was over age and could not defend her laurels, and Miss Bishopp defaulted in the third round, leaving the current finals to two comparative newcomers in playground ranks.

First Photos of Galento Since His Illness

It was a much-improved Tony Galento who glowered up from his hospital bed for these two pictures taken yesterday at Orange, N. J., where Tony has just gone through a few bad rounds with "that bum, pneumonia." It was the first time he had been able to have his picture taken since illness stopped his training for a battle with John Henry Lewis. He fought the illness for a week, underwent three blood transfusions.

Bosox Take Double Bill From Chisox

Boston Wins, 13-8, 8-5; Jimmy Foxx Hits 28th Homer.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—Boston's Red Sox moved within two games of the second place Cleveland Indians today by slugging their way to a double victory over the Chicago White Sox, 13 to 8 and 8 to 5.

Boston won the first game, a battle of base hits, by scoring five times in the eighth inning and then five more in the tenth after the White Sox had tied it. Jimmy Foxx, Ben Chapman and Joe Cronin, of Boston, and Boze Berger, of Chicago, hit home runs. It was Foxx's twenty-eighth of the season.

Boston piled up 17 hits off three White Sox pitchers while Chicago nicked four Red Sox twirlers for 13 safeties.

Carl Hubbell Snaps Giants' Losing Streak, Beating Cards

'Meal Ticket' Allows Only Seven Hits to Score His Twelfth Victory, 2 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—Old reliable Carl Hubbell put a stop to the Giants losing landslide today. He gave up seven hits, pitched shutout ball for eight innings and defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 2 to 1, to end the streak.

Hubbell, who has been the only Giant pitcher to go the route since July 10, turned in his twelfth victory of the year in today's tilt. The win left the Giants five games behind the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mel Ott's twenty-second homer, in the second inning, and Bob Seeds' run-producing two-bagger in the third gave the Giants their two runs. The only Cardinal tally was scored by Pepper Martin, whose third hit off Hubbell was a triple in the ninth. He came home on Ducky Medwick's infield out.

Bees Beaten By Reds, 4-2

Frey's Double With Bases Loaded Does It.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28. — Linus Frey's two-base smash with the bases full in the fourth inning today gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-to-2 victory over the Boston Bees and an even break in the current four-game series. Frey's hit scored three mates and spoiled Bobby Reis' first start on the mound for Boston.

The Bees pulled up close in the eighth as Johnny Cooney tripled. Deb Garms doubled and Tony Cuccinello singled to tally two runs. In the ninth Ival Goodman tripled and Ernie Lombardi sent him home with a scratch single.

Reis was singy in the pinches, except in the fourth, when he gave up four hits in a row. He walked five men in the first three innings, but pulled out. It was Peaches Davis' sixth victory against as many losses.

9 Davis Cup Hopefuls Given Chance to Make Tennis Team

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—The wide-open race for vacancies on the defending American Davis Cup Tennis team was narrowed down a fraction or two today when Walter L. Pate, Davis Cup captain, named nine players who will spend the balance of the season under his supervision and two others who definitely are under consideration for the squad.

Bobby Riggs, Frankie Parker, Bitsy Grant, Joe Hunt, Hal Surface and Don McNeill, all members of the first ten, and Gil Hunt, Elwood Cooke and Frank Kovacs make up the first group. All of them are comparative youngsters, though Parker and Grant were on last year's team. The two others are Sidney Wood and Wilmer Allison, veterans of past battles for the trophy.

Although he did not say so definitely, Pate apparently has decided to stick to Gene Mako as Don Budge's doubles partner. He said his eleven candidates will be rivals for two places on the squad that must be named August 24, ten days before the challenge round begins at the Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

Having placed themselves in the hands of Pate and his committee, the nine younger players will get financial aid from the U. S. L. T. A. if they need it, as well as advice on what tournaments to play in and how much tennis may prove too much.

Pirates Beat Phillies, 9-2

Al Hollingsworth Falters Excellent Start.

Philadelphia, July 28 (AP).—After holding the league-leading Pirates to one hit for six innings, Al Hollingsworth blew up today and Pittsburgh scored seven runs to beat the Phillies, 9 to 2.

With the Phils ahead, 2-1, through Spud Davis' single in the second and Chuck Klein's double in the fourth, Paul Waner started the Pirates' big seventh by getting a base on balls.

Suhr also walked. Rizzo singled, scoring P. Waner with the tying run. Al Smith replaced Hollingsworth. Vaughan singled, filling the bases. Wood singled, scoring Suhr and Rizzo. Young walked, again filling the sacks. Tobin singled, scoring Vaughan and Todd. Johnson replaced Smith. Young scored after Handley's drive to Klein. L. Waner singled. Paul Waner singled, scoring Tobin with the seventh and last run of the inning.

Hollingsworth had the better of Jim Tobin in a pitching duel until he blew up. Tobin went on to hold the Phils to seven hits for his ninth victory.

The Pirate's scored again in the eighth on Vaughan's double, Todd's infield out and Young's single. Their first run came in the fifth when Suhr walked, went to second on Rizzo's single, to third on an infield out, and scored on Todd's fly to Klein.

Phil Weintraub, Phils' first sacker, was thrown out of the game in the second inning by Umpire Goetz. Weintraub led off with an apparent double to right center, but was called out for not touching first. In a rage, Weintraub threw his cap and glove at the umpire.

Hildebrand Holds Yanks, Browns Win

Allows but 7 Hits to Take 3d Straight; Two Hit Homers.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 28.—The Yankees did most of the homer-hitting, but the Browns won the ball game today, handing the New Yorkers a 4 to 3 defeat behind Oral Hildebrand's seven-hit pitching.

The defeat—only game the Yanks lost in the four-game series—shaved the New Yorkers' American League lead to one game over the Cleveland Indians, who were rained out.

All the Yankee runs came on homers. In the fourth, Joe DiMaggio walloped his eighteenth and Twinkletoes George Selkirk clouted his fourth. In the sixth, Lou Gehrig bounced his seventeenth off the top of the right field pavilion.

Except for those three slips, Hildebrand ran into little trouble as he chalked up his third straight victory and his eighth of the season against six losses. He had accounted for three of the four victories the Brownies have turned in since July 3.

Bump Hadley, who went the route for the Yanks and was charged with his third defeat against four wins, gave the shaky performance that has marked his hurling in his last few starts. The Browns tagged him for two runs in the first inning when Mel Almada doubled and George McQuinn followed with his fifth homer of the year.

After the Yanks tied it up in the fourth, the Browns proceeded to put the game on ice in the fifth with another two-run outburst. Hildebrand started this with a single, went to second on Almada's base hit, and when Mel Mazzera was hit by a pitched ball, the bases were loaded. Harland Clift slapped a single to center to drive the winning runs home.

Galento Said to Be 'Definitely on Mend.'

Orange, N. J., July 28 (U.P.).—Tony Galento, heavyweight boxer, who is a penumonia patient in the Orange Memorial Hospital, is "definitely on the mend," his physician, Dr. Joseph E. Higi, said today.

Dr. Higi said Galento's temperature has returned to normal and he has been removed from an oxygen tent. Unless "unexpected complications set in," Galento should be out of the hospital "in a week or ten days," Dr. Higi said.

When he gets out of the hospital, Galento will go to the West—probably Arizona—for a month to recuperate.

Polo Victory To Ft. Myer

Camp Hill Riders Lose, 15-8, to Locals.

The Third Cavalry polo team of Fort Myer turned back the West Shore Club of Camp Hill, Pa., yesterday, 15 to 8, in the second game of the semifinal round of the Southeastern Circuit Polo Championship on the East Potomac Field.

The game got off to a fast start, with the Third Cavalry team scoring twice in the first chukker, and then adding three more goals in the second chukker. Capt. Jackie Hines played an excellent game at No. 2 for the Cavalrymen, scoring seven goals, three of which came in the last chukker.

J. F. Hempt played a very aggressive game for the West Shore team, but the Pennsylvania team was unable to score until the fifth chukker. In this same period, Frownfelter took a bad spill when his pony slipped near the Third Cavalry goal, and time had to be called. He continued in the game, and his injury was believed to be only slight.

Capt. Donaldson made repeated shots from difficult angles to score five times and also played a great defensive game. In the third chukker he took the ball down the field to score from about the 40-yard marker, with two West Shore players racing at his side.

By virtue of the Third Cavalry's victory, they will meet the War Department team next Sunday on the East Potomac field at 3 o'clock for the championship of the Southeastern Circuit, and the winner of this game will go to Chicago, to compete in the Natoinal Polo Championship.

Ernie Dusek Pins Olson

Wins Mat Feature in 19 Minutes.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Dripping like Niagara at floodtide and wheezing like a freight locomotive of 1890 vintage, barrell-chested Ernie Dusek outsmarted a boisterous young muscle-masher by the name of Cliff Olson in the feature bout last night at Turner's Arena.

Exactly 19½ minutes had ticked off on the grandfather's clock Timekeeper Sam Ugal totes around in his vest pocket when Master Olson tossed the quivering carcass of Ernie across the ring. He repeated the maneuver, backing Dusek into the ropes and pulling him out again to gain the momentum.

The third time he attempted it Ernie clung momentarily to the top strand, causing Cliff to lose his balance. Olson slipped backward and Dusek merely released his hold, fell on him and held his sweaty shoulder on the canvas while Referee Ben Bortnick spoke his customary piece. The fans thought Benny gave Olson a quick count, claiming he skipped "two," but Bortnick majestically ignored the complaint, and brushing off the peanuts that landed on his unshirted person, left the arena.

The matchc did not measure up to expectations. Olson was not his customary undiplomatic self because a squadron of ringside detectives, including J. Edgar Hoover, ace sleuth, discovered him secreting peanuts, adhesive tape and other bric-a-brac about his person and vociferously called the referee's attention to same.

They prodded Cliff to such anger on one occasion he made a grab at one patron, but thought better of the idea and climbed back into the battle pit. Another time, after Dusek had unceremoniously dumped him into the aisle, Cliff lost complete control of himself and hurled a cluster of chairs into the ring. They had to stop the performance while the patrons formerly occupying same regained their seats.

Olson managed to tweek Ernie's nose, kick him in the midriff, slap him around a bit and finally gag him before going down. He also clamped a punishing leg lock on the eventual winner and then suffered a reverse procedure.

In the other bouts Ed Meske and Wally Dusek struggled 30 minutes to a draw, and ditto for Wally Dusek and Paul Boesch. All four parties insisted on continuing the argument after the bell.

Bill Ackerman on Fishing

A fisherman's special will leave Washington Saturday midnight, August 6, for the fishing grounds off Atlantic City, over the Pennsylvania Railroad. Six dollars covers all transportation, boat and bait. For a small additional amount, breakfast a packed lunch, and dinner at one of the hotels will be included. Tickets should be obtained beforehand at the downtown office, for they will be sold only to the capacity of the boats. Advance sections, arriving before 6:30 a. m., will, in all probability, be operated.

ACKERMAN

Fishing conditions are prime throughout August in this south Jersey resort, so there is every right to expect some real fun, not only with the ever ready porgies and seabass, but from the schools of sea trout that haunt the many wrecks in the area.

In other metropolitan centers, special fishermen's trains operate throughout the season; not occasionally, but almost daily. There are many fine fishing grounds within easy running distance of Washington, so if local anglers want to find out what other sections have to offer now is the time. These trips will not be continued without a demand. We are glad to help with an additional information that might be needed.

The rock are schooling in almost every section of the bay—in the Chester River, Eastern Bay, Herring Bay and in the great cove, between Plum and Cove Points. So far they have been rising only occasionally, which is to be expected at this early date. However, it is a good indication we will have again the type of stripped bass angling this fall that we enjoyed for three weeks last season, when several schools ganged up along the edge of the steamboat channel from Point No Point to Smiths Point, on the Virginia shore. Only this year, there is every right to believe it will be even better, because the schools are larger and spread over more territory.

In te meantime, although here and there catches are being made through the medium of trolled lures, the best fishing is under the Eastern Shore, from Tilghman's Island to Love Point, and by chumming and baiting with live shore shrimp.

Hard to obtain any time, because almost everywhere the price is prohibitive, from $3 to $5 per gallon; yet worthwhile when you do get in the fish, for the unweighted lines give the fish every chance to do their stuff.

Capt. Bob Lee, at Shadyside, has been making some nice catches this way, fishing Poolar Island and Eastern Bay, near Bloody Point Light. The best time is soon as the floodtide is going good—that is, all the way to the bottom, so that the chum line runs straight.

Norfolk spot are biting good most everywhere—catches up to 40 and 50, an everyday occurence, particularly at their regular hangouts, such as the channel under Blackistone, and all the way into the first buoy in the mouth of Breton's Bay; off the entrance to Smith's Creek, and in the Patuxent above Solomon's Island, from Town Point to Broom's Island.

The marlin run at Ocean City continues unabated. Even the miserable weather of the past week failed to dampen the ardor of the marlin in taking the baits, or the anglers in going out to troll them.

In fact, now, more than ever, if you expect to try it, be sure to make your reservations ahead. And not only for the boats, but for hotel accommodations as well. Hardly any of the boats have week-ends open, and only here and there, week-days.

There are such great quantities of bait offshore, there is no way of definitely telling just when this fishing will let up, for a bad spell of weather is about the only thing that could break it by scattering these schools of bait fish.

In the interim the big fish are having a Roman holiday. Big sulphur-bottom whales by the hundreds have taken possession of the south end of the Jacks Pot, and add some to the excitement of the embryo big game fishermen, as they blow great spouts of spray in the air, and roll some 30 or 40 feet of their great bulk clear of the surface, sometimes hardly a 100 feet from the boat.

With them, schools of porpoise, also blowing and playing. Their bellies tight and glistening from the lush feeding.

Occasional albacore and big bonito, as well as small schools of iridescent dolphin that often now are hitting the carefully prepared marlin baits, but which are always aceptable to most anglers, not only for their great beauty, but as well for the delicious meat.

Blues are there, too, but striking seldom. Large schools that anglers are trolling through and scarcely noticing now, but which, in a few more weeks, will be seeking just as avidly as they are the marlin now.

We give the spearfish another whirl this week with Lawrence Richey and Ollie Atlas, and the score still stands at zero. We would have liked to blame it on the weather, which was swell underfoot, but awfully wet overhead, only several of the boats found a small school far inside of the Jacks Pot, and managed to take eight, thereby breaking down a perfectly good alibi.

But it's true about us—what they say about others who have ben out—to see them rise to the baits, strike, and put on a show unapproached by any other fish that swims. It's in our blood now, and before we were back to the dock, talking about going back again.

Morris, Burrows, Gipe Make Team

Oliveri Birdies Four Consecutive Holes on Final Nine to Succeed Rippy as Champion; Morris Trails by Three Strokes.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A new public links champion was crowned yesterday at East Potomac—one Andrew Oliveri—who applied the pressure on the last six holes with a finish that would befit a Jones or Hagen to pace the pay-as-you-play boys with a 312 total for the 72 holes.

The new champion, runner-up last year and a constant threat for the crown during Claude Rippy's 3-year reign, had apparently passed up another opportunity to win the municipal title as he went 11 over par for 12 holes on his final trip. But Andy suddenly hit a hot streak and rapped in four birdies in succession, followed with two pars to become the king of the public links.

Second by a three-stroke margin was young Bob Morris, who played with Oliveri on the Roosevelt High golf team two years ago, with a 315 count. Morris had received congratulations on his apparent victory and had posed for a dozen pictures with the trophies but that was before Andy's hot streak.

Burrows Is Third.

A three-time former champion and seven-time member of the Harding Cup team, Ted Burrows, was third, assured of another trip to the national championship. Burrows and Morris approached the last green tied, at a time when their score looked like a winner, but Burrows missed a 2-foot putt to tie Morris and finished with 316.

Jim Gipe, the Navy machinist, duplicated his fourth place performance of last year with a 317 total that assured him of a berth on the team that will represent the city in the national championship in Cleveland, August 22 to 27. S. G. Loeffler, donor of the new trophies won by Oliveri, will sponsor the team.

In the alternate's spot was a former team qualifier, Pat Axtel, who required 319 blows over the 36-hole route, 2 too many. Three were deadlocked at 322 in a tie for sixth place. Jack Keele, one of the three players to crack the 80-mark twice in yesterday's play with 78, 79; Joe Micker and Bobby Bowers, Rock Creek clerk, who had the first par round of the tourney.

Gipe Has a 317.

Tommy Doerer's course toughening act put the winning score 28 strokes over Rippy's 284 of last year, and left Oliveri 24 shots above par figures. Gipe, who won fourth place last year with 296, won it this year with 317, to show just what a few hundred yards, several traps and a little mud on the ball can do to the players.

Willis Hurd, the halfway pacesetter, soared to 89 on this third round, and finished with an 83, to fall 13 shots behind Oliveri. Bobby Burton, a '37 Harding Cup team member, finished with 323, while one of Wednesday's leaders and a pretournament favorite, Hary Saunders, was 327.

Oliveri, assistant in his father's shoe-repair shop, took the lead at the three-quarter mark with a 233 total, aided by his morning round of 39—37, 76. He soon slipped from the favorite's role, however, as he hit a streak of 5's and 6's in the afternoon. He was out in 7 over par 43 and started back four more over regulation figures. 6—5—6.

Flock of Birdies.

His tee shot on the thirteenth hole was about 6 inches from the green and 30 feet from the cup. Andy rolled it in and followed with two, 4 and 6 foot putts for birdies, and then finished easily in par to shatter Morris' victory dream into a runner-up's nightmare.

Morris, Labor Department clerk, was tied for the fourth spot with 18 holes to play, but drew the gallery by playing the first sub-par round of the event, a 35 on the out 9. He took 42 coming in, however, to post his 315. Burrows was tied with Morris after the fifty-fourth hole, slipped back with a 39 on the third 9 of the day, and returned in 40, including an 8, to regain all but one stroke.

Gipe played rounds of 42—39, 81 and 38—42, 80, to clinch a team berth. He played consistent golf over the 72-hole route, his rounds varying only three strokes. A low of 78 and high of 81.

Only 21 of the original field of 105 completed the test over the two-days' play. Two more players were disqualified yesterday, after playing 54 holes, Al Wilhelm because he was a member of Indian Spring this summer and Julian Williams, as he caddied after reaching his eighteenth birthday. He is now 22.

Busy K. 'Doped' Report at Spa Shows.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 28 (AP).—Chairman Swope of the State Racing Commission announced today that all further entries of the horses under the care of L. E. Ogle be refused until the investigation of the horse Busy K, owned by D. A. Wood, is completed.

The report of Charles E. Morgan, commission chemist, disclosed the presence of a stimulant, caffeine, in the saliva test analysis of the 4-year-old, Busy K, when he won the Yonkers Handicap at Empire City, July 23, defeating a good field.

Baseball Schedule Worrying Harridge.

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—An unprecedented number of postponed games may mean a treat for the baseball fans who like their thrills in daily double doses, but it's a headache to William Harridge, American League president.

To date, the league is 39 games behind schedule, and Harridge is beginning to wonder if the weather man ever is going to behave long enough to allow his schedule arrangers to get caught up on rained out contests.

TopMen Swimmers In Event Today

Louisville, Ky., July 28 (U.P.).—America's top men swimmers and divers, plus several entrants from Canada and Hawaii, gathered here tonight for the men's indoor swimming and diving championships, beginning tomorrow at Lakeside Pool.

Defending national champions in every effort were present, led by Adolph Kiefer, Chicago, king of the 100-meter back stroke, and Ralph Flannagan, Miami, who will attempt to repulse chalengers in three title swims, the mile, 880 and 440.

N. B. A. Will Recognize Hostak as 'Champion'

Providence, R. I., July 28 (AP).—The National Boxing Association will recognize Al Hostak of Tacoma as world middleweight champion despite the action of the New York commission in declaring the title vacant, said Edward C. Fenton, executive secretary of the N. B. A., today. Neither will the N. B. A. pay any attention to the New York board's action in taking from John Henry Lewis the light-heavyweight championship, declared Foster.

Here are the two D. C. anglers with their prize. Edward Calladay is on the left, with son, David C., on the right with the fish that weighed close to 80 pounds. They fished from Capt. B. L. Raymond's Lev-Lou.

To Joe Krakauskas, three points, because he allowed only one earned run in his four innings as a relief pitcher and because his double made possible the Nats' first run.

To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, including a double in the ninth.

To Sammy West, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits and drove in a run.

To Goose Goslin, two points, because as a pinch-hitter he doubled driving in a run.

Bryan Grant Is Beaten by Frank Kovacs in Upset at Sea Bright

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Uncrowned Champion.

He never could have been the popular conception of a champion even if he had won the title. He wouldn't fit in at all with the picture Charles Dana Gibson drew of the heavyweight ruler of the ring—a big, robust man strutting down the street, surrounded by urchins with upturned eyes and expressions of awe.

VIDMER.

He might have strutted a little, but it would have been easier to roll, and the kids might have followed him, but there would have been a smile of amusement on their dirty faces instead of awesome expressions. But he never will be champion now—probably never would have been anyway—yet tough Tony Galento has just about won the bitterest battle of his life.

No two-fisted fighter, not even a Joe Louis, could have given him the argument that Old Man Pneumonia tossed at him. Yet Tony fought it off and won lying flat on his back. And maybe that's a greater triumph than any contest won in the ring.

They could very well call him Tough Luck Tony now, for he was headed for the heights when he was knocked down by an antagonist he couldn't reach with a right-hand punch. He was going to fight John Henry Lewis, the light-heavyweight champion, in spite of what the New York State Athletic Commission says, this week and if he had beaten Lewis he would have been in a position to demand a meeting with Joseph Barrow Louis, a more important figure on the fighting front.

Against Tradition.

He might not have beaten Joe and taken the title. The chances are that he wouldn't have come close, but he would have been in the chips and the rest of his days would have been filled with beer and spaghetti with no financial worries to mar his appetite for either.

He would have made a farcical champion if he had won from the Brown Bomber, more of a burlesque figure in the business of boxing than Max Baer or Primo Carnera. He even would have been a farcical challenger. But no one would have begruded him the wealth that flows in even to those who fight and fail in their quest for the heavyweight crown.

Tough Tony deserved whatever he could get out of the ring. He always gave the customers the best that he had, and if sometimes his best appeared ludicrous, at least he left them with a laugh.

Let 'Em Laugh.

I never even heard anyone express the opinion that he could beat Joe Louis if they ever met. But Tough Tony had a following. Sometimes they went to laugh at him. Somehow it seemed funny to see the round and rollicking beer-loaded lad from New Jersey climb into the ring with a broad-shouldered, clear-eyed, perfectly conditioned fighter and belt him out with a punch or two.

And although he was viewed with something less than awe and admiration he always was viewed through friendly eyes. The fight fans came to wish him well. And the best he could have received would have been the challenger's share of a world's heavyweight championship gate.

The field of heavyweight challengers may be somewhat barren at the moment. Or perhaps they are no worse than the crops of the last decade—only Joe Louis stands so far above the rest that they all look bad. But, at least, Tony was at the top of the heap. He was rated just back of Joe Louis in the heavyweight division and, consequently stood forth as the logical challenger for the title.

He couldn't have been ignored. He would have been the one man the public would have paid to see in the ring with the Brown Bomber. And then on the eve of his chance to prove himself, he was stricken with pneumonia.

Phantom Fight.

It was a fight for which he hadn't bargained, and a fight without compensation in dollars and cents. It was a battle for existence. But tough Tony wasn't awed by his opponent.

"I'll lick this! I'll lick it!" he murmured through swollen lips as he lay under an oxygen tent with his temperature hovering around 105. And apparently he has made god his boast.

Tough Tony is on the way to recovery, and the fight fans are cheering him in their hearts as they might have cheered him with their voices. But the chances are that he never will regain the heights he held before he was flattened by something he couldn't see or reach, or take a punch at.

The chances are that Tough Tony never will be quite so tough in the ring again. It will be months before he will be able to box, and when he does it is likely that he will find that he has left that wicked wallop somewhere under the oxygen tent in a Jersey hospital.

Still, he has fought a good fight, an admirable battle, and even if the New York State Athletic Commission and allied bodies fail to recognize him as such, who can say he is less than a champion?

Tough luck, Tony

Chiozza Is Lost To Giants' Club.

New York, July 28 (AP).—The injury-ridden New York Giants have lost the services of utility player Lou Chiozza, possibly for six weeks.

Chiozza suffered a separation of his right shoulder joint in lunging for a grounder during yesterday's game with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bobby Riggs Heads March To Semifinals

Frankie Parker Also Bows in Form Reversal to Elwood Cooke.

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 28.—A pair of unranked coast sensations scored stunning upsets in the fifty-first annual Sea Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club invitation tournament here today as Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, led the way into the semifinals of the grass court classic.

Frank Kovacs, 18-year-old Oakland, Calif., youth, blasted Third-seeded Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, out of the tourney in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2, and Elwood T. Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., eliminated Kovacs by surprising Second-seeded Frankie Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., 7—5, 6—2.

Riggs gained the round of four by disposing of Robert L. Harman, of Oakland, Calif., 1—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Wilmer L. Allison, Austin, Tex., veteran, completed the semifinals bracket when he shattered the Davis Cup team aspirations of blond Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

Grant Outclassed.

Kovacs, who will be 19 in December and is 6 feet 4 inches tall, never gave Grant a chance in their quarter-finals clash. Although he has played on grass for only two weeks, the gangling Californian was steady and apparently sure of his shots from start to finish.

He forced Grant, fourth-ranking United States amateur, into constant errors and exhibited a well-rounded stroke equipment which made him a hardly worse than even choice in tomorrow's semifinals test with Riggs.

Cooke forced the fighting in his two-set triumph over Parker, the third-ranking U. S. star. Trailing 0-3 in the first set, Cooke rallied to tie the match at 4-all, and broke through Parker's service three times to win the set, 7—5.

Parker seemed sluggish in the second set and Cooke swept through the set with the loss of only two games to record his fourth straight-set triumph of the week.

Cooke Is Liked.

Experts conceded Cooke an excellent chance of eliminating Allison in the semifinals tomorrow.

Allison, former internationalist and finalist here last year, flashed some of his old brilliance as he whipped Wood in a minor surprise.

The 34-year-old Texan banked on his blasting service to spoil the Davis Cup chances of his youthful rival, turning on the heat in the final set to remove all doubt that he was the better player here today.

Riggs, engaged in a personal campaign for the No. 2 singles berth on the Davis Cup squad, displayed alternately poise and petulance in his match with serious Bob Harman.

Blonde Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., gained the final set of the women's doubles when they defeated Marilynn McRae, of Little Rock, Ark., and Barbara Winslow, of Hollywood, Calif., 6—2, 8—6.

They were joined in the title round by Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, who turned back Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Dizzy Dean Predicts Cubs Will Take Lead.

Philadelphia, July 28 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs will be on top of the National League in a month, said confident Dizzy Dean today.

"Those Pirates ain't so tough," the Cubs' pitcher said as he watched Pittsburgh battle the Phils. "We'll slow them down. I'll stop them with my assortment of dizzy stuff. They're fast ball hitters. Yeah, with my luck we'll be on top in a month."

Klinger, Sensational Buc Rookie Hurler, Develops Sore Arm

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 28.—Booming Bob Klinger, the Missouri rookie whose pitching performances have helped make National League pacemakers out of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was shelved temporarily tonight with a sore arm.

Manager Pie Traynor disclosed the big righthander who has won eight and lost two, would not be able to take his regular turn tomorrow when the Buccaneers invade Brooklyn on the second stop of their Eastern swing.

"Klinger visited a doctor twice while we were here," explained Traynor, "and was told to rest until Monday and then to start working out gradually. There isn't much chance of him getting back in the line-up before we hit the Giants a week from tomorrow."

The Pirates have paraded to their present position with no serious sickness or injury hindrances, but Traynor added:

"The whole team needs a rest. We've been playing a lot of hard baseball and we haven't run into a rainy day for week. I hope there's nothing seriously wrong with Klinger because we need him."

Klinger claims his arm first developed soreness during spring training after he had worked part of a night game at San Francisco. It has been a private worry between Traynor and himself for several weeks, but he explained today:

"Most of the time I've been able to pitch the soreness out. However, the last couple of games I started I didn't last very long and I decided to look up this specialist in Philadelphia."

The Pirates, who have won 23 of their last 29 games and haven't lost two in succession since June 5 and 6, regard their Eastern road trip as a critical stage in their pennant chase.

Brooklyn, their next foe, is the only club which has an advantage over the Pirates for the season. The Dodgers have won seven games to Pittsburgh's six.

Journey On Race Winner

Wins Hudson Purse at Rockingham Park.

By the Associated Press.

Salem, N. H., July 28.—Taking the lead going into the backstretch and never surrendering it, W. L. Brann's Journey On today scored by a length and a half in the Hudson Purse to give fromer jockey Lou Schaefer the pleasure of saddling the winner of the feature for the second day in a row at Rockingham Park.

The Challenger II gelding paid $6.76 to win and was the first favorite to score during the day. He was timed in 1:40 for the one mile and his winning his first race in nine starts this year.

Finishing second by a neck over W. A. Jones Veiled Lady, Mrs. C. H. Conyers' Fred Tracey paid $5.52 to place, while Veiled Lady returned $3.38 to show. At the finish Veiled Lady had a length and a half advantage on the Fanfare Farms Officiate that finished fourth.

Arlington Event To Squaw Lady

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—F. P. Letellier's Squaw Lady added a spectacular stretch run to her earlier domination of the mile Blackhawk Purse at Arlington Park today and beat the favored Cardinalis by three-quarters of a length. Mrs. G. H. Emick's Dunnamany was third.

Squaw Lady was timed at 1:42 4-5 over the heavy track and paid $19.20 straight.

Friends and admirers of Vic Sampson are finding it difficult to understand why the George Washington backfield star is even tempted to continue in his position as assistant manager of a hotel cocktail spot rather than finish his college career this fall . . . Vic, a good if not brilliant student and a better-than-average football player, was reported to have said in an interview the other morning that he didn't think he'd return to school even though he is a senior . . . Coach Bill Reinhart of the Colonials has been indifferent when the subject of Sampson's decision has been mentioned . . . His attitude is he comes back or he doesn't . . . So what? . . . However, from his manner you get the idea that he expects his little halfback back . . . Speaking of G. W. gridders leaving school, we learn that Ed Williamowski, the promising sophomore who quit last week, is headed for West Virginia, which will meet the Colonials this fall . . .

If the reception fans have accorded night baseball in Cincinnati this season may serve as a criterion, the nocturnal sport is not diminishing in popularity but rather increasing steadily . . . For the first four night games played there this season the highest average attendance of any year has been attained . . . It is estimated that in the space of those four years the Cincinnati club has profited some $200,000 more than it would have without night games . . . New York fans seem to have resigned themselves to the fact that the Giants are not going to repeat their 1937 National League pennant dash . . . Or so you gather in Gotham . . . It seems that Alex Kampouris, for whom the Terrymen gave up Berger and more cash than they'll admit, is a complete flopoloola at second base . . . And to make matters worse for the weak-hitting Giants, Berger is among the five leading hitters of the league at this writing . . .

A rumor is spreading quickly that the Washington Redskins already have Sammy Baugh's signed contract and that the hold-out talk which is making the headlines almost daily is just so much publicity . . . Jim Swet, a 190-pound fullback, is one of G. W.'s most promising sophomore football prospects . . . Swet, who is working for Coach Bill Reinhart at the East Potomac swimmnig pool this summer, played at Shenandoah College last fall and comes highly recommended by Charley Quatsi, Colonial tackle, who played against him a couple of years.

Somerville Wins Twice

4 Americans Win Twice in Canada Play

Savage and Kingsley Lead Advance at London, Ont.

By the Associated Press.

London, Ontario, July 28.—C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canada's golfing great, led a rapidly diminishing field into the fourth round of the Canadian Amateur championship today, an odds-on-favorite to win.

Somerville, who has won the championship six times, had only four United States golfers left in the field to trouble him after yesterday's play. The way he played his second and third rounds—he had a hole-in-one in the second round—led observers to believe that none of them had the shots to beat him.

Top United States entry still in the running is Ven Savage, of Magna, Utah, the trans-Mississippi titlist. Savage downed Mike Taylor, of Toronto, 8 and 7, in his second round match yesterday, but then was pressed to a 1-up triumph over Tommy Riddell, also of Toronto, in the third round.

Ed Kingsley, also of Magna; Dick Lutz, of Ashland, Ohio, and Ted Adams, of Columbia, Mo., were the other Americans still in the running as today's play began. Four fell by the wayside yesterday.

Best known American to be eliminated was Hank Kowal, the former Colgate University star, from Seven Oaks, N. Y., who was defeated by Jimmy Todd, of Victoria, 1-up in his third round match. Ed Meister, of Canterbury, Ohio, lost to Jimmy Hogan, Jasper, Alberta, 6 and 5, in the third round.

Somerville downed R. C. Storey, St. John, 8 and 7, and R. G. Ellis, Montreal, 5 and 4.

Yankee Athletes Win in Sweden.

Gothenburg, Sweden, July 28 (AP).—Touring United States track athletes won five out of six events today as a two-day international meet opened here.

Ben Johnson, of Columbia, started a sweep of the track events when he captured the 100-meter dash in 10.4. Howie Borck, of Manhattan, scored in the 800 meters in 1:54.7 and Chuck Fenske, of Wisconsin, won the 1,500-meter run in 3:57.4.

Ray Malott, of Stanford and San Francisco's Olympic Club, was first in the 400 meters with a winning time of 47.4. Gil Cruter, of Colorado, scored the fifth United States triumph when he won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 4 25-32 inches.

Bergh, of Sweden, scored the only European victory with a discus heave of 162 feet 3 9-32 inches. Pete Zagar, of Stanford, was fourth with 147 feet 19-32 inch.

his slump with two hits. The first Washington run of the game was driven over by Krakauskas who surprised everybody, including himself, by hitting a double against the left-center fence in the eighth after Giuliani had singled.

The Nats succeeded only in delaying the finish with their three runs in the ninth, which began with Bonura's double against the rightfield wall. West and Myer produced a pair of singles and Goose Goslin, appearing as a pinch hitter, pounded a double to right that scored a pair of his pals.

However, it all added up to the Tigers' fifth straight victory, their longest winning streak of the year.

Night Ball to Stay At Brooklyn.

New York, July 28 (AP).—Baseball under the arc lights at Ebbets field is an established success, Brooklyn Dodger officials agreed today as they scanned attendance figures for their first four night games.

The after-dark inaugural on June 15, when Johnny Vander Meer pitched his second straight no-hitter, drew 38,748 customers. After that came 25,511 for the June 21 game with Pittsburgh, 18,696 for the June 29 game with Boston, and 34,414 for last night's game with the Chicago Cubs, in which the Dodgers scored their first arc light victory since Boss Larry MacPhail introduced night baseball at Cincinnati four years ago.

The total of 117,369 for four games averages almost 30,000 per game. Club officials frankly admit that the same four games, played in the afternoon, would have drawn a total of no more than 35,000 fans.

Jack Dempsey Joins Protests for Al Hostak.

Seattle, July 28 (AP).—Jack Dempsey today joined the protest of the Seattle boxing world against the New York Athletic Commission's refusal to recognize Al Hostak as middleweight champion of the world.

The Seattle fighter won the championship (outside of New York) by knocking out Champion Freddie Steele, of Tacoma, Wash., in the first round Tuesday night.

The New York commission refused to recognize Hostak to "protect" two other West Coast fighters—Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, and Young Corbett 3d, of Fresno, Calif.

"It's the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of," said Dempsey who referred to the Hostak-Steele fight. "Championships change hands in the ring and not in any commission's office."

Jane Cothran Out Of Asheville Play

Asheville, N. C., July 8 (U.P.).—Sally Guth, comparatively unknown from St. Louis, entered the semi-finals of the Biltmore Forest women's invitation golf tournament today when her opponent, Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., favorite, defaulted.

Miss Cothran withdrew because of serious illness of an aunt.

In other quarter-final results Marion Miley, Southern women's champion, of Lexington, Ky., defeated Mrs. John F. Degener, of Charlotte, 10 and 8, and Aliene Hoover, Thomasvill, N. C., defeated Marion Gaynor, Charleston, S. C., 4 and 2.

Miss Guth was paired with Miss Hoover in semifinal matches tomorrow, and Miss Hemphill with Miss Miley.

Japan Tops Canadians In Cup Play

Holds 2-0 Lead After Opening Round Matches.

By the United Press.

Montreal, July 28.—Japan scored overwhelming victories over Canada today to take a 2-to-0 lead in the opening round of Davis Cup play in the North American zone.

Canada, entering a team for the famous tennis trophy for the first time in four years, was outclassed badly by the Japanese in today's singles matches, and was conceded no chance of advancing further in cup eliminations.

Jiro Yamagishi, singles champion of Japan, won easily over Canada's ranking player, Bob Murray, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3, after his teammate, Fumiteru Nakano, had won the opening tilt, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2, from Ross Wilson. The Maple Leaf players went as far as their limited ability permitted, battling for every point, but they didn't belong in the same league with the Nipponese netmen, and there never was the slightest doubt as to outcome of either match.

Sensational Tennis.

Yamagishi played sensationally, driving hard shots down the sidelines and deep into the back court or lobbing his returns far from Murray's reach. Only once, in the second set, did Murray hold the lead. Yamagishi rocevered quickly, however, and ran out the match.

A torrid sun beat down on the court as Wilson and Nakano opened the first match. Both players obviously were affected and had to stop repeatedly to wipe the perspiration from their arms and faces.

A capacity crowd of 3,000 people filled the stands surrounding the court. Another 500 persons watched the matches from the house tops.

Today's Matches.

Tomorrow Yamagishi and Nakano meet Wilson and Laird Watt in the doubles match and are 2-1 favorites to win. Canada has little chance of taking more than one point in the series. Murray may beat Nakano in Saturday's play but Yamagishi will certainly have little trouble in blasting Wilson in the final singles match. The victor will meet the winner of the Mexico-Australian series here August 11-13 and move into the interzone final against the European winner.

Navy Boxers Set To Meet Nittany.

Annapolis, Md., July 28 (AP).—E. W. McKee, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, today announced that the Navy boxing team would meet the Penn State boxers next spring.

The two institutions were keen ring rivals for many years. They last met in 1937, when Penn State defeated the Navy, 7½ to ½.

The Navy boxing schedule announced earlier in the year listed four bouts for the 1939 season—Cornell, on January 21; Western Maryland, February 4; University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, on February 11, and Syracuse, February 18.

Kinder Sets Pace In New Jersey Golf

Madison, N. J., July 28 (U.P.).—Johnny Kinder, former champion from Plainfield, N. J., held a one-stroke lead tonight after the first 18-hole round of medal play in the New Jersey State Open golf championship.

Kinder was 3 under par with a card of 34, 36—70. Ted Turner, Pine Valley, and Andy La Pola, Florham Park, were tied for second with 71's, and Frnak Kringle, Linden, was fourth with a par 73.

National Open champion, Ralph Guldahl, went 3 over par with 39, 37—76.

Karcher and Krause Sign With Redskins.

Thirty-four Redskins have agreed to 1938 terms, Jim Karcher being the latest to come through.

The 24-year-old former Ohio State player will be serving his third season as a Redskin. He plays guard.

Henry "Red" Krause was also signed yesterday, making the center of the line more potent. Krause is counted upon heavily this season along with Karcher. Krause is the only center to sign. George Smith has an injured shoulder which may keep him out of the line-up for a while, and Ed Kawal, who alternated with Smith last season at the snapper-back post, has yet to sign.

Look Out, Stevie! Them Spies Is Watchin' Ya!

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A fiendish plot to undermine Steve Mamakos and next Monday night's fight show at Griffith Stadium was happily discovered late yesterday afternoon by one of Gen. Joe Turner's aides-de-camp.

The scheme came to light with a shout of "Eureka," along about 4:30 o'clock. One of the general's trusty aides spoke up.

Hey, you know what," he cried, "we've been spied on by that Heine Blaustein. He's been over here getting the dope on Mamakos right under our noses and he'll have his man ready to kill this Mamakos Monday night. It's espionage, that's what. Espionage."

George King reached for his handy fowling piece and Billy Mack hastily locked the safe, but Gen. Joe Turner nonchalantly scratched an ear and said:

"That sounds like a good idea; maybe we'd better report it to the police—I mean the papers."

The story, it seems, is that Blaustein, who handles Ivan Nedomatsky—Mamakos' prospective opponent—is conducting a little espionage business on the side. Heine, it is reliably reported, hired Joe Dundee, former welterweight champion, to do his gumshoe work, and Joe, equipped with one of the niftiest spy outfits listed in the mail-order catalogue, has been making notes on Mamakos.

Damaging notes they are, too, for Dundee made the discovery that Mamakos can be hit with a right hand. He was so amazed at this he furiously peddled back to Baltimore with the news for Blaustein. Our Baltimore correspondent reports their conversation thusly:

Dundee (breathlessly hopping off his Black Beauty. "Great News boss, great news. The Greek can be hit with a right hand. He can be hit with two right hands, as a matter of fact. He can be hit right on the mug with it."

Blaustein (triumphantly gloating over the discovery): "He can, eh? Well, we'll show that bum a right hand or two. Order up a couple of dozen rights for Ivan. We'll feed him rights till he thinks an octopus is hitting him."

Back in Washington Turner's aides de camp were grinding out stuff about Ivan developing a "Baltimore knockout punch." He, like George Abrams was supposed to have done, developed said punch within a week. Dundee, who allegedly won his title using the punch—which, it is well to note, is illegal—is supposed to have instructed Nedomatsky in its use.

It seems that you kick the opposition in both shins, when it bends down to rub them you kick it in its southern exposure, and when it resumes an upright posture you hit it on the forehead with a sledge hammer, conveniently supplied by your husband. If this fails to work, it is advisable to leave the ring—and town.

Dundee, it is rumored, has a suspicion that Mamakos has other faults, too, but what the heck, you can't expect a guy to find out everything in one night! He is reported figuring out ways and means of slipping into Steve's training quarters to discover that the Greek can be hit with a left hand as well as a right. Once this problem is solved, all Nedomatsky has to do is walk out and hit him.

News of Capital Night Clubs

Johnny Slaughter should use his spare time from making sweet music in Wardman's Metronone Room in writing a travel book—if he writes like he talks. He has a flair for out-of-the-way places and his last junket abroad included northern Africa and the Near East. "I'd like to live in Algiers," says Johnny. "It's the Paris of Africa."

Chief musical memory of his trip is the girl string band he saw in Stamboul. They had a bay-windowed male leader who looked like a deposed sultan. "Those girls were a" right as long as they stuck to their string music," says Johnny, "but when they started to blow those Turkish horns, I went away from there."

Pretty scrumptious is the new King Cole entertainment combination, songstress Evalyn Knight and accordionist and novelty entertainer, Eddie Whitesell.

You'd never guess it, but farming is one of the popular subjects of conversation on the Shoreham Terrace. So many of the gentlemen and ladies who frequent the Terrace are farmers by avocation. But, one and all, they're a pessimistic flock of agriculturists.

There's Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland. He says, smiling a bit wistfully, "No, I never expect to make any money out of my farm. I just have it." And Mrs. Oliver Owen Kuhn wrinkles her pretty brows perplexedly when she talks about the prospects of the tobacco crop on the 600-acre farm she has down the Potomac.

Outstanding among the unenthusiastic farmers of the Shoreham Terrace is Mr. Harry M. Bralove, owner of the Shoreham. His farm is out Rockville way. "Disappointment," says Mr. Bralove sternly, "Why, you don't know what disappointment is until you have a goose set on eggs for 28 days and hatch never a one."

Two former Madrillon waiters now occupy important executive posts in Republican Spain. They are John Borras, chief sanitation officer of Barcelona (and a mansized job he has, considering that Barcelona has rocketed from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 in population since the war started), and Chris Borras, in charge of a children's camp outside Barcelona. Both are brothers of Peter Borras, manager of the Madrillon, and were working in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Barcelona when the big trouble started. So look carefully at your waiter—he may be a future premier.

Coloring Up:

The Rainbow Room should also be called "Rhapsody in Blue"—at these intervals when they switch from the iris lights to a full set of pale blues.

Another feast of color is that delicate pink and azure interior of Bamboo Gardens with its cream-colored Venetian blinds and slashes of claret in draperies and lighting.

For exterior color lure just take a peak at the sharp white with cherry red trim of the Show Boat out Laurel way. It makes you decide to get right on and sail away for an evening's dancing with the Three Dees.

But for a color riot, a symphony of all the colors that ever were, there's nothing around like Mayfair (alias Cafe of All Nations) and its international murals, set off by modernistic lighting. If color gives you a lift, then Mayfair will send you a-soaring.

Kibbee appeared at Walter's home, rang the door bell until the butler appeared, and asked: "Does Mr. Kibbee live here?" The butler shook his head in negation. "Gee," said Kibbee as he left. "Walter gave me the wrong address!"

JOE FRISCO is still biding his time before returning to the boards. Some years back, in Chicago, the manager of the Croydon Hotel gave him lodging until the happier day when employment would come. Joe possessed 30 cents and started a rummy game at a penny a point. In ten minutes he was cleaned, but the other players agreed to take his I. O. U.'s if he'd continue playing. "If we're g-g-gonna play owings," Frisco suggested, "l-l-lets make it a n-n-nickel a p-p-point!" An hour later he called quits because he owed too much. Then he phoned the hotel clerk. "S-s-send up eight c-c-caviar sandwiches." Frisco ordered. "Three b-b-bottles of champagne . . . and . . . and a b-b-buck!"

NICK THE GREEK accompanied Sam Boston to Hot Springs. When Nick was there last, he suffered from an infection of the right arm. Three doctors attended him and advised amputation. Nick wasn't troubled by the physical pain or the problem of becoming a one-armed card shuffler or dice thrower. One thing alone prompted his successful gamble on further infection . . . and probably his life. "It's bad enough they call me Nick the Greek now," he explained his refusal, "but I couldn't stand being called One-arm Nick!"

"And E," he concluded, "is for Endeavor" . . . and the close of a two-hour speech. "We're lucky," was Gerard's consolation, "he wasn't graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology . . ."

After a wait, the operator informed Oscar that Mr. Harpo refused to accept the call unless it was prepaid. So now Oscar Levant is angry . . . at Mrs. George S. Kaufman!"

MARSHALL NEILAN told this Wilson Mizner story: He and Mizner had vowed to go on the wagon for four months. "On the life of your mother, whom I love very much," Mizner swore, "I'll touch nary a drink before then." The next week Neilan met him. From his pocket a bottle of rye projected and he was stiff. Marshall lifted the bottle, sampled it, and cursed. "That stuff would kill a horse," he raged. "And you had sworn on the life of my mother that you wouldn't touch a drop." "Stop beefin'," said Mizner, "she gave me the bottle."

General Motors Notes Upturn In 2d Quarter

This compared with $8,234,017, or 14 cents a share, made in the first quarter of this year, and with $65,731,100, or $1.48 a share, in the second quarter of 1937.

For the six months ended June 30, net profit was $33,020,019, equal to 66 cents a common share, against $110,545,266, or $2.47 a share, in the like period of 1937. Net sales for the second quarter of 1938 amounted to $272,264,537, compared with $250,512,587 in the preceding quarter of 1937. Net sales for the recent six months were $522,777,124, against $837,262,749 in the first half of 1937. For the 12 months through June, net sales were $1,292,304,216, against $1,469,132,187 in the preceding 12 months.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors, says in his report that a reversal of the downward trend established in December appears to have taken place in the latter part of June and has been sustained up to the present.

Earnings have been affected favorably by drastic reductions in operating expense and to better relative maintenance of profits emanating from overseas operations and from sources other than domestic manufacturing operations, Mr. Sloan says.

Wheat Prices React After Earlier Rise

New Crop Movement Induces Increased Selling Near Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—Late downturns of wheat prices today more than offset earlier fractional gains that resulted largely from unfavorable conditions for spring crops, United States and Canadian.

Increased selling which developed near the end of the day was associated with the domestic new crop movement, especially in winter wheat areas. Southwest receipts today totaled 967 cars, against 857 a week ago.

On the other hand, buying for houses with export connections accompanied the upward market trend that was apparent most of the time. Unconfirmed rumors persisted that 14 cargoes of United States wheat had been sold of late for export, to Spain and Germany in particular.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅛ cent lower, compared with yesterday's finish, September, 67⅞-68; December, 69⅞-70; corn, ⅜-¾ down; September, 57-57⅛; December, 54⅜-54½; oats, ⅛-¼ off; rye showing 1¼-1¾ drop, and provisions unchanged to 22 cents setback.

Stocks Recover From Selling Attack and Work Higher in Lighter Trading.

New York, July 2.—The stock market came back today after a brief spell of heavy selling encouraged by Wednesday's break. Bullish forces were more timorous than they have been earlier in the current advance and doubtless there was considerable selling based on the expectation of margin calls. But, in any event the list had its worst moments near the opening and devoted the balance of the day to attempts to recover. This it did with a fair degree of success, the composite average showing a net advance of 0.63 point but the volume of trading amounting to only 1,065,630 shares, which was the lightest in about two weeks.

Interest again centered in steel shares, which have been the leaders since the current bull market started nearly six weeks ago. Thus far the news from the industry has been contained in stories of price cuts and moderate improvement in operations, accompanied by deficits rather than earnings and a postponement of wage cuts. It is a question how long such a situation can last.

The contribution today to the above outline of news was downward readjustments in the prices of tin plate, a reduction in the price of light rails and the quarterly statement of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The last-named development was not quite according to precedent, for Bethlehem managed to avoid use of the red ink. Its results were relatively better than those of its competitors, for Bethlehem showed a profit for the second quarter of $150,305. This compared with net income in the previous quarter of $994,908 and profit of $10,022,874 in the comparative quarter of 1937.

Of more interest than the fact that the company stayed in the black by a narrow margin in the second quarter, however, was the comment of Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem's president.

Bethlehem.

Bethlehem, it is true, showed a small profit for the second quarter, but this period does not reflect the deep cuts in prices effected late in June, which were augmented today. Nor does it give a clue to what extent profits will be affected by the elimination of basing point price differentials.

The price cut effected in light steel rails today is not important as far as the total business of steel companies is concerned. Standard steel rails are not affected.

United States Steel closed up 1½ today and Bethlehem was fractionally higher as was Republic. All groups of stocks joined in the late recovery and there was good support for the motors and equipment issues. The Street took kindly to the reports of Chrysler and General Motors, as well as to the observations of the executives of these companies, Chrysler adding 2⅜ and Motors 2 points. Yellow Truck was up 1¼.

Skies Brighten.

News from channels other than the stock market contributed to the belief of the majority of market followers that Wednesday's reaction was technical. The dollar and Government bonds were higher. Steel operations give indications of edging forward and the scrap markets are firm. Engineering contracts this week are 8 per cent above the previous week and 3 per cent above a year ago. The Associated Press reported that second-quarter profits for the first 157 companies to report were 62 per cent below the comparable period last year.

Among the commodities, there were late downturns in w

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

In the old days, show business was a sorta world of mystery and the layman didn't understand anything at all about it, but today the radio has educated the people so that they talk the jargon of the theater like seasoned actors.

Last Sunday we was all going to church and when my aunt said she was afraid we was late, my uncle says, "No, he ain't started preachin' yet—I can hear the organist playin' his theme song."

29th Division War Games End At Front Royal

Encounter Between Blue, Red Forces Features Last Day in Camp.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., July 28.—Maneuvers of the Twenty-ninth Division ended today near Winchester, Va., in the midst of one of the most active encounters of the command post exercises. The Blue Army of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord had advanced to a position on the north edge of Winchester, but were repulsed on their left flank by Red reinforcements from Alexandria and Harpers Ferry. The Blues made a center attack and were halted by Red tanks. Later in the day two additional counter attacks were made.

Cavalry on Round Hill withdrew and the hill was drenched with poison gas to keep the enemy off. Gen. Reckord, acting on authority from general headquarters, gave a warning order to prepare for a withdrawal to a point a few miles south of Opequon Creek.

During the day the air service had reported an additional Red brigade approaching. At this point in the maneuvers, the field exercises ceased. Tomorrow a critique will be held. Plans for the withdrawal will be discussed and the results of the problem will be examined.

The troops of the camp located at Passage Creek Military Reservation, near Front Royal, Va., already have broken camp and are sleeping on the ground in pup tents. Trucks manned by the 104th Quartermaster Regiment today started conveying materials back to Washington for use of the 121st Engineers, who are preparing to go to Camp Ritchie, Md.

No small part of the success of this camp is due to the care that medical officers have exercised.

For the 15 days of camp, the Medical Detachment, under the command of Capt. Robert M. Bolton, camp surgeon, and Lieut. James B. Bradley, dental officer, both of the District of Columbia National Guard, treated about 400 cases. This is 20 per cent less proportionately the number of men at camp than in previous years.

Capt. Louis M. Gosorn, executive officer of the special troops, congratulated Sergt. Joseph Myersoff, of Headquarters Company, Twenty-ninth Division, for the manner in which he operated his camp utility detail. He was assisted in his work by Corpl. Naylor.

Headquarters Company, District of Columbia National Guard, is the apparent softball champion of the camp, it having today defeated the Medical Department Detachment, 9-2. Winning batteries in almost all games were Corpl. Edward Casey and Lloyd Rigsby.

During the Spanish-American War he participated in the battles of El Caney and San Juan in the Santiago Campaign and then was ordered to the Philippines where he received the Silver Star for gallantry in action against the insurrectionists.

Gen. O'Neil commanded the 179th Brigade, Ninetieth Division, during the World War.

A graduate of the Army War College, Gen. O'Neil also held the Oak Leaf Cluster and the French Croix de Guerre.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nina T. O'Neil, of Portland.

Company to Add 500 Taxis Here

Addition of 500 taxicabs in Washington will be made after the new cab liability insurance ruling goes into effect on August 28, it was announced yesterday by the representative of the Parmalee interests of New York, operators of Yellow Cabs.

C. B. Ryan, who holds the local Yellow Cab franchise, said company officials felt they would have a distinct advantage over competition since they would have no difficulty in raising a sinking fund of $75,000 in lieu of insurance. The regulations permit drivers or association members to establish sinking funds instead of taking out insurance policies on a graduated scale.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Fence-Straddling.

Summer blisters Washington again, after a relieving spell of rain, and we had hoped the rain would continue and make the nights cool so the many meetings wherein important speakers elucidate upon the executive orders of June 24 might be bearable This theme has become the basis for row between the United Federal Workers of America and certain critics who, allegedly, said the nights were too hot for the meetings and, besides, the meetings are futile, anyway.

We seized upon this yesterday in looking through the current issue of the U. F. W. A.'s "Federal Organizer." A headline stated, "A Survey of What Was Done About the Orders," and a pungent paragraph declared, "Dr. Charles Stengle, A. F. G. E. president (asserted): As yet we have only curbstone opinions on the President's executive orders. Until final interpretations are made, I think it is silly to hold meetings in this hot weather."

This declaration of policy was viewed by the U. F. W. A. editorial writer as "the year's best Sour Note Symphony."

Accepting the statement that Col. Stengle really made the remark, this column somehow sympathizes with him. And—at the pain of being labeled a fence-straddler in this impressive controversy—we can sympathize also with the view of the editor (U. F. W. A.).

For, despite the uncertainty of the Orders' interpretation, Federal people are understandably interested in how their own personal and individual card will be shuffled from the deck. And a job being of more than passing importance these days, it is easy to see why they turn out to the meetings, hot weather or rain, for one glimpse—if yet dimly revealed—of how they will stand when the cards are laid on the table for better or worse next February 1.

"Meanwhile," says the U. F. W. A. editor, (the) "U. F. W. A. will continue with its series of meetings, letting those who will dawdle along. Here is one race where the tortoise has gone to sleep while the rabbit runs swiftly on."

Sympathy.

To all of this, Col. Stengle has not replied, and again we sympathize a little with his viewpoint. We have been to those meetings, and some of the rooms were hot as a high school picnic. But the trouble is that in so many instances we came out by the same door wherein we went and the heat was scorching while the light was sought.

But one thing, more and more was learned as the meetings progressed. No one, other than someone on the curbstone, will try to give you precise and final information on what the Orders actually will do. Of course, certain phases of them are obvious—but in the broader "look" it may be years before all the wrinkles are working and nailed down to the hard boards of practice.

Civil Service Commissioner Mitchell said as much himself at a meeting which was sponsored the other night by Col. Stengle's own A. F. G. E. He was asked:

"What agencies and positions are affected by the executive orders (June 24) extending the competitive classified civil service., i. e., to what class of positions may the President, by executive order, extend the provisions of the civil service act and in what agencies may such positions be found?"

* * *

Lemonade, Please.

His verbatim answer was:

"It is impossible to go into details in answering this question. Generally all positions in the older departments which are not now under the civil service law are placed under it by the executive order except position where confirmation by the Senate is necessary. However, some of these positions are likely to be again excepted, because, in the language of the order itself, they are 'policy forming,' or are 'positions which special circumstances require should be exempted.'

"Nobody can say now what positions will be found to be policy forming, nor what positions will again be placed under the new Schedules A and B. That will have to be determined following recommendations by the various departments or agencies to the Civil Service Commission, conferences between the commission and the departments or agencies if the former does not agree that the exceptions recommended should be made, final recommendations by the commission to the President in transmitting the department's recommendations, and such further consideration as the President gives to cases where there is disagreement."

That is the broad "look," and the civil service president has not, in the meantime, altered his focus. Still, many points can be cleared up at the meetings—but, in all conscience, they should serve us lemonade!

Private Operators in 30 Industries Act at Conference Here.

A new organization—the National Council of Private Motor Truck Owners was formed here yesterday.

Organizing it were representatives of 30 industries, representing manufacturers, farmers, merchants and others who own and operate the 3,500,000 trucks in the Nation which are not for hire.

Repeated declarations that extreme restrictions and regulations" covering the use of private trucks "threaten" efficient business operation marked the meeting.

Delegates formally dedicated their organization to the promotion of "the safe, economic use of highway transportation by agriculture and industry in private motor trucks."

One of the initial activities of the council will be to gather the facts relative to the effects of Federal regulation of hours of service and standards of equipment, and to present these facts at hearings to be held at the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Among industrial groups and businesses represented at the meeting were delegates from agriculture, bakeries, food products, distributors, beverage bottlers, manufacturers of explosives, cleaners and dyers, brewers, retail stores, petroleum, automobile manufacturers, dairy products, mail order houses, ice cream manufacturers, live stock producers, and laundries.
